SHELTERING within its walls some thirty-six hundred pupils representing forty different nationalities, the institution herein known as the Proviso Studios, Incorporated, is typical of all America. Blending many elements, rejecting some, creating others, it seeks to develop a new type of citizen whose vision shall embrace far horizons, and whose interests shall be world-wide.

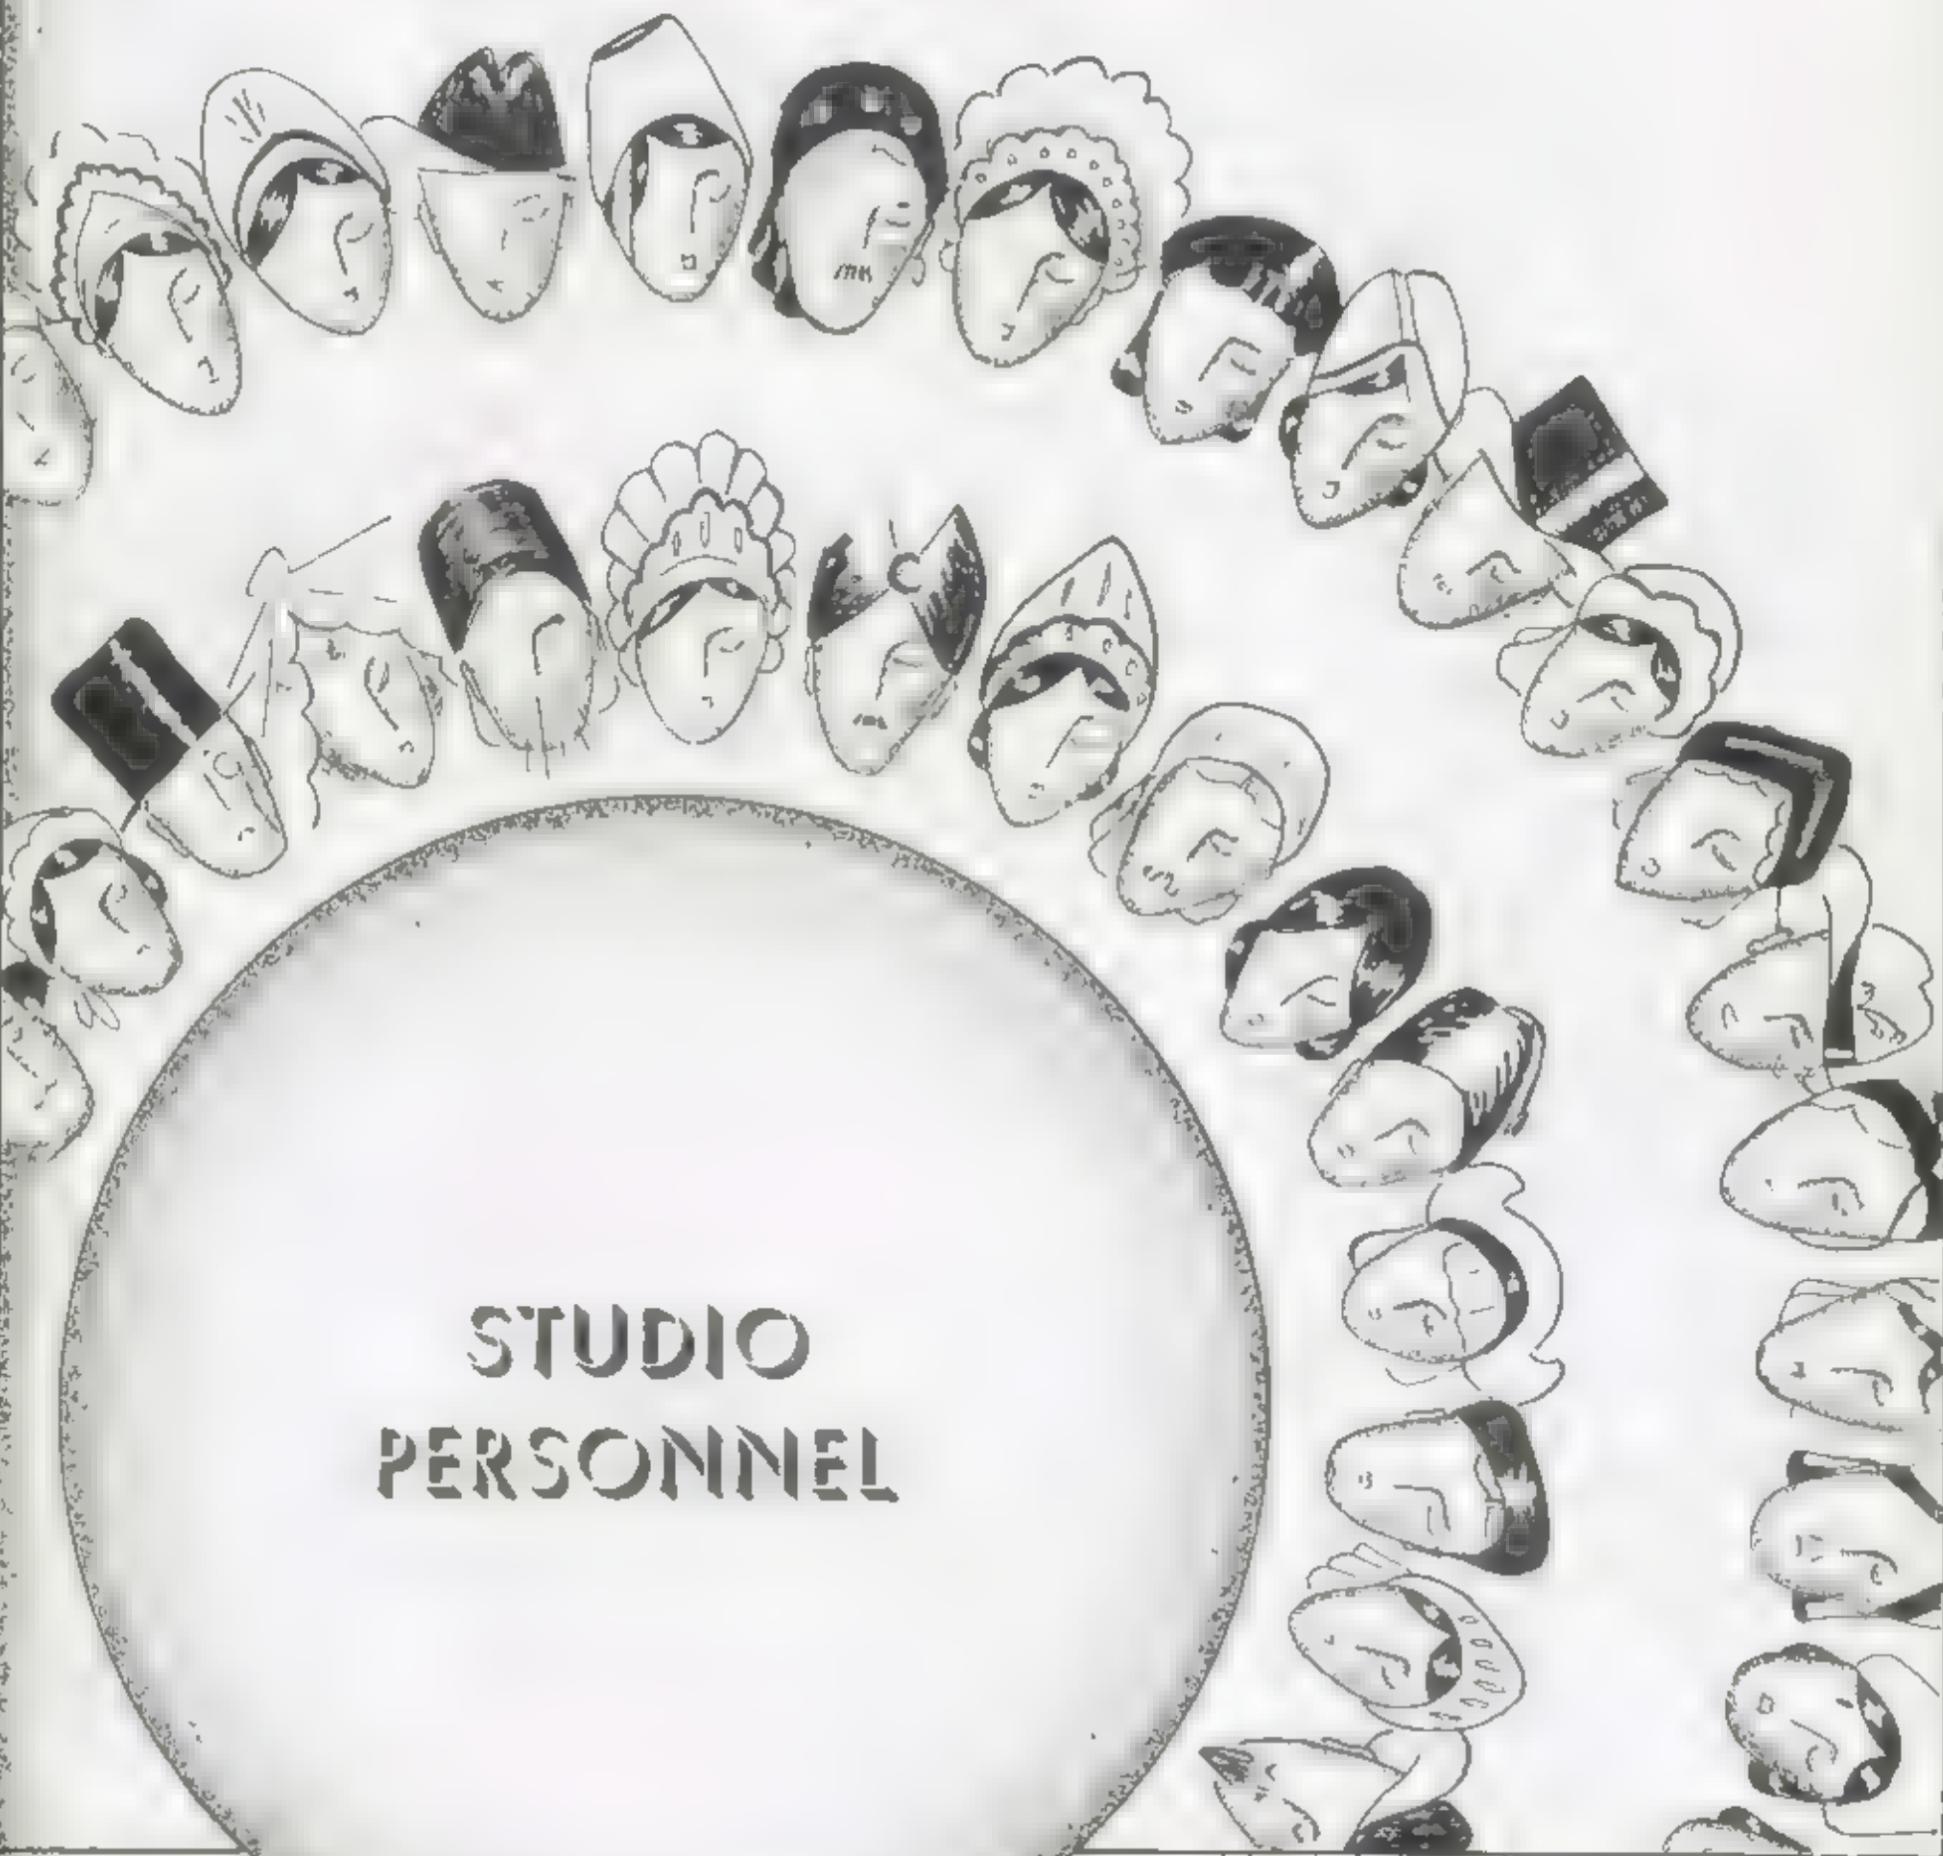

It is fitting, therefore, that World Citizenship should be chosen as the theme of the 1937 Provi. Using the movie as a medium through which to present the multitudinous persons and events which enter into a year of high school life, the staff has sought to call attention to elements which may truly be said to be valuable in cultivating a spirit of world brotherhood: Kindness, Comradeship, Fair Play, Devotion to a Cause, Tolerance, Generosity, Cooperation.

The PROVI STAFF of 1937 presents "PROVISO ON PARADE."

D E D I C A T I O N

*T*O Miss Amy Barnum, head of the history department, who, through reading and travel, has developed a sense of world citizenship, and who, through her teaching and her friendship, has done much to promote a spirit of tolerance and understanding of other nations among the students of Proviso, we, the Provi Staff of 1937, fraternally dedicate this volume.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Every corporation that produces moving pictures must have a central board of managers which attends to financial matters, chooses the director, and sees that the productions meet the public's needs and desires. The board responsible for these matters in the great Proviso Studios, Inc., is known as the Proviso Board of Education.

During the year 1936-37, the officers of this board were H. W. Ewert, president, and John M. Newcome, secretary. Following the election held in April, the board was re-organized for the following year with Mr. Newcome as president, and Emery A. Parichy as secretary.

The Board of Education is an administrative body. It sets the policies of the school; the superintendent, in the role of producer, carries out these policies. While the producer must answer to the corporation, the corporation is responsible to the public, that is, to the tax-payers, the citizens of the township. The Board of Education has as part of its official duties seeing that money is spent properly, that the personnel of the studios is well-trained and adequate; that contracts are properly executed; and that necessary purchases are made to assure the up-keep of the set and the progressiveness of the institution.

The Board of Education looks to the head director, Superintendent Earl R. Siefert, to formulate educational policies for the school and to have general oversight of its personnel. Superintendent Siefert is new to Proviso Studios, Inc., this year; he was chosen by the present board from among more than one hundred applicants from all over the country on the basis of his outstanding record as an educator. He is constantly on the alert to keep Proviso in the front ranks of public high schools.

Outstanding among the board's achievements for the year is the new field house, now under construction. On September 10, the board published legal notice to the effect that it had adopted a resolution to issue bonds, amounting to $250,000. This amount was to be supplemented by a grant of $203,727 from the federal government, an opportunity not to be ignored. Moreover, money could then be borrowed at a low rate of interest. A petition was signed demanding that this project be voted upon so on November 14, the citizens of Proviso township went to the polls and approved two propositions that of authorizing the construction of a field-house and that of issuing bonds to the amount of $250,000 to help pay for it.

The Board of Education seeks to draw the school and the community closer together. To this end, it encourages band, orchestra, and choral contests, sports, and other mass programs. It believes that crowds of loyal adults supporting these various activities act as a spur to greater achievement on the part of all teams and individuals participating.

The present financial standing of Proviso high school is sound, as recognized by leading Chicago banks. The Board of Education announces that its aim is to be progressive, and at the same time to maintain an economical policy that will meet the needs of the masses.

There are numerous preparatory studios located on the Proviso lot, which are dedicated to developing talent for parts to be played on the great screen of life after four years of preliminary training.

Novices enter Proviso's gates and are given positions as extras. From time to time certain promising pupils step out of the ranks as extras, and for a while act before the cameras in stellar roles.

Chief among Proviso's staff of directors are two groups, the administrative group and the advisory group. The former is in charge of leading the extras in their particular studios and generally supervising the filming on the lot. The latter greets each new novice, advises him as to the type of role he should play, and tries to make him take advantage of the opportunities offered on the sets.

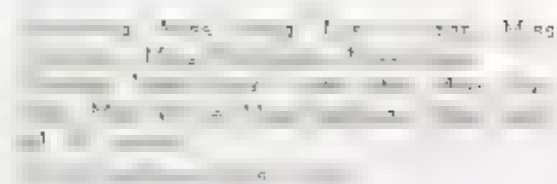

Members of the administrative group are E. R. Sifert, superintendent and C. C. Taggart, assistant to the superintendent. The "chief," Mr. Sifert, works with the Board of Education in establishing the general policies and procedure of Proviso's schedule; selects the directors who will carry these out; supervises that staff and furnishes its inspiration, and unites the school with the community. Mr. Taggart carries out the details of these activities and serves as an intermediary between the grade schools and this lot.

Superintendent Sifert, new to this lot from Oklahoma, has stressed the opportunities home room teachers have to advise and direct their pupils. He has introduced a plan to have extras organize and conduct their own studios. During 1934 he spoke before the Illinois Teachers' Association and attended the convention of the National Teachers' Association held in New Orleans.

Participation in major and minor roles is an outstanding feature of Proviso. Along this line, a guidance counselor, who announced that it was his duty to create a school environment and later

The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the car was the cold, crisp air. It felt like a fresh blanket. I took a deep breath, savoring the scent of pine and the distant sound of water. The sun was just rising, painting the sky in soft, golden hues. I walked towards the lake, my boots crunching on the frost-covered ground. The water was still, reflecting the early morning light. I found a small, frozen stream that led to a hidden waterfall. The water cascaded over smooth, dark rocks, creating a misty spray. I stood there, watching the water flow, feeling a sense of peace and wonder. The world around me seemed to be holding its breath, waiting for the day to begin.

LANGUAGES

'A good course in a foreign language is worth more straight thinking than an equally good course in logic,' says E. A. psychologist. One out of every five beginners on Proviso's lot is studying German, French, Italian, or Spanish. These languages correlate with work in English, history, geography, mathematics, art, and music, and are an index to modern civilization. They give insight into the lives of other peoples, broaden the student's understanding of human problems and relationships, promote international interest, and break down racial prejudices.

Modern languages prepare future stars for speaking parts in government service, journalism, secretarial roles, medical work, tourist agencies, radio broadcasting, dramatic productions, and other fields. Students correspond with players in a foreign country.

In the Latin studio, reading ability is developed. The study of Latin throws on professional training of doctors, nurses, teachers, musicians, historians, and scientists.

Die Deutsche Jugend, Les Amis du Français, La Sociedad Española, Giovinezza, and Res Romana are clubs which seek to supplement classroom study by social and cultural projects connected with the language and the history of the country involved.

Directors Julia F. Evans, Florence B. Williams, and Humbert Gentilin head the language departments, assisted by seven sub-directors. Last summer, Mr. Gentilin visited Italy as a guest of the Italian government, and French Director Ada Ross studied in Germany. Spanish Director Frances Gossell completed the work of a master teacher. Other directors studied or traveled to prepare the further to serve as guides to youth.

History should act as a preventive of prejudice and narrow-mindedness, and should foster tolerance and open-mindedness, which must be the foundation of a sound plan for the human future."—Harry Elmer Barnes

Because today is understandable only in the light of yesterday, the history novices on Proviso's lot follow current events that are the most recent developments of those historical events studied in class. Four crews, the Historians, Cosmopolitans, Travelers, and Statesmen clubs, produce film for "Proviso on Parade" after training hours.

Miss Amy Barnum is chief copy-holder. She qualifies for this position by being the most travelled of all the Proviso staff having gone to Europe twice, and having made a four-months' tour of the Orient last summer. R. W. Marshall, E. W. Stubbs, and Miss Frances H. Trost studied at universities during vacation.

All music is elective, and try-outs are held for membership to any musical club, instrumental. The purposes of music rehearsals are to strengthen individuality, to enhance life during periods of work and leisure, and to develop love for and appreciation of good music.

The Proviso choir, choruses, band, and orchestra produce concert film, and the Musicians' Solo and Ensemble club carries on instrumental work. Head sound-director is R. Lee Osburn.

The art studio furnishes an artistic setting for all Proviso films, and the more able extras are formed into an art service section, often designing parts of Proviso's settings. Miss Wilhelmina Marm supervises the production in this department, assisted by Miss Beatrice Bonine. Both art directors studied last summer; Miss Bonine, in Columbia university; Miss Marm, in the Rocky mountains.

assembled in a single production. Outstanding among the celebrities in the experienced cast are E. R. Sifert, a new-comer to Proviso's lot, who appears in top billing, and C. C. Taggart, already well known, who understudies.

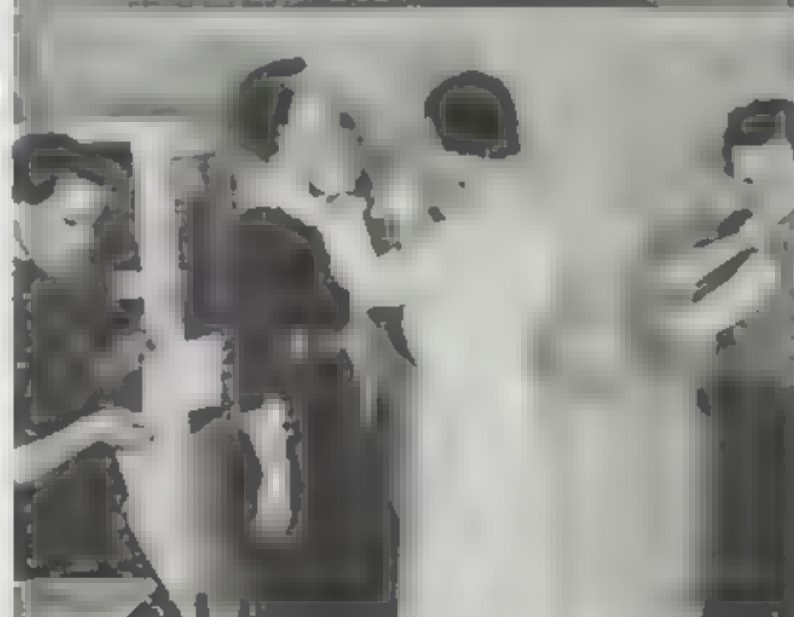

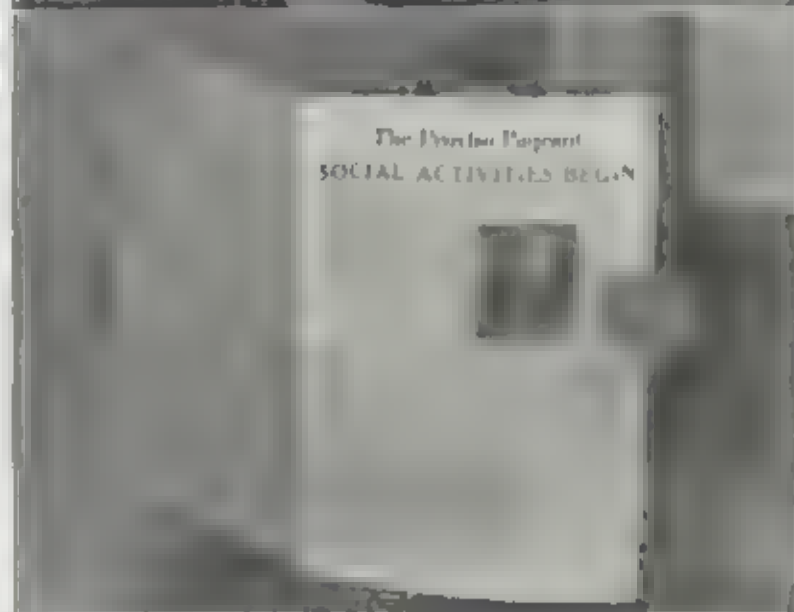

Twelve new featured players in "The Parade" arrive as additions to the cast, bringing the total to one hundred twenty. In the stenographic department, Miss Alice Beemer and Miss Ma Lamar in the science department, by Miss Eleanor Lonek and Miss Marguerite Barra. New players in the department are John R. Couleur and Iver W. Soderburg; in the history department, W. Wall; in the English department, E. Bryan, who will be a regular; Mary E. Carroll, registrar, and Miss Pauline Wagner, clerical. The girls' and boys' advisers, complete additions to Proviso's personnel.

The older, more experienced cast is a group of novices, who have yet to earn star ratings. This huge ensemble, varying from 3,500 to 3,700 in number, represents more than thirty nationalities. The entire cast is one of the most cosmopolitan groups ever assembled in a single production. Individuals emerge from the ensemble to play featured parts, steps on the way to becoming stars.

The parade opens with a smashing mob scene, as Proviso's 3,619 students in three assemblies to discuss problems introduced to each other, as Superintendent who has come to the lot for this purpose, takes the crowd to the Parade.

The Student Book is presented to each student on the first day of school. The handbook is a continuation of last year's publication, and is a guide about Proviso, and the freshmen become acquainted in a painless manner possible. Miss Eileen White supervised it.

On September 18 three assemblies are held for the purpose of presenting the Pageant, the weekly publication, and a season's football pass in a special combination.

ve cents. The ticket includes admission to all football games, and fifteen issues of the Pageant. Manley Immel, of the English department, Miss Florence I. Otis, supervisor of publications, and E. R. Siefert, superintendent, urge the students to co-operate in the purchasing of tickets. Miss Otis gives previews of the new Pageant, another of Proviso's rejuvenated features.

The same day, the Pageant makes its first bow for the 1936-37 school year on the screen of Proviso in a new costume and with fresh make-up. The paper is a six-column publication, instead of five, and has grown two inches during the summer. The ragged headlines are still in use, and the second page is given over to a magazine section. New directors of the Pageant are Laura Campbell, editor-in-chief; James Stromquist, managing editor; Dorothy Carver and Bruce Carson, literary co-editors; Ruth E. Marsh, Helen MacPhail, Lucille Marcus, and Laverne Vorets, assistant editors; Alvin Samuelson, advertising manager, and Edward Huebner, circulation manager. The featured players are aided by a minor cast of script-writers—seventeen—efficient or not so, and eleven business staff members.

All freshmen receive complimentary copies of the first issue of the Pageant. The staff feels it has not lived in vain; freshmen, stimulated by Miss Ruth Whitfield, of the English department, write letters Edward Schlink, editor-in-chief of the 1918 Provi, is remembered again, when a piece of glass bearing his name is discovered in the physics laboratory in Room 201. The little square is still intact.

John Carter, assistant librarian, resigns in the last week of September, to do graduate work at Harvard university. Miss Viola Fried arrives to take his place.

On September 24 Teachers dear hold frolic, and have a lot of fun; Students weep in agony—they aren't allowed to come." Members of the faculty take a holiday from tiresome everyday duties, and make merry in honor of Superintendent and Mrs. E. R. Siefert, the other new members of the faculty and their wives, the members of the Board of Education and their wives, and themselves and their wives. Golf-minded individuals tee off at St. Andrew's golf course; card sharks enjoy bridge at the Baker hotel in St. Charles; all gather in the dining room of the hotel at 7:30, and partake of a steak dinner and trimmin's. Music is led by R. Lee Osburn. Manley W. Immel acts as master of ceremonies. General chairman is Miss Elizabeth B. Oakes. Other chairmen are Miss Fae Duvall, dinner; Miss Wilhelmina Marm, decorations; Miss Florence I. Otis, toast program; H. J. Stegman, invitations and place cards; Miss Frances Gospill, cards; U. C. Foster, golf; Miss Mary Wheeler, dancing; Miss Helen Robinson, prizes; J. W. Moerk, stunts; H. E. Carr, transport.

AST ASSEMBLY

TELL LEADERS PAUSE FOR BREATH

Superintendent Sittert, in an interview, introduces a new plan for having student-conducted and organized assemblies. He hopes to have between 700 and 1000 students participate in assemblies throughout the year.

The Board of Education publishes a legal notice stating that it has adopted a resolution to issue bonds for a much-needed field house for Proviso. The field-house is secured, crowded academy will also be relieved, because the "new" gymnasium will be divided into twelve additional classrooms.

The first of October unreeals a medical shot in the film as 1,745 girls receive their physical examinations. The beauty-conscious feminine players learn that 934 of their number have low arches, and that 176 have flat feet! Eighty-five of the would-be stars are given only "second ratings" in heart examinations; only 14 are chosen as having perfect hearts. "Beauty is only skin deep," remember the disillusioned girls.

October also sees Proviso's students in the first outdoor football assembly of the year. Most of the players take their places in the audience, while a few of the huge cast go into their specialty act. The temporary captain of the football team, the freshman coach, the cheer-leaders, the president of the senior class, Proviso's "Man of the Mike" and her new head director take their places under the klieg lights and before the critics.

ire! Fire! The stars make hasty exits forgetting to consider the effect of their graceful lack of it, on the camera, as they hurry from the stage in the fire drills.

Two more players added to the cast are Miss Elizabeth Schenfeldt and Miss Charlotte Dege, who will play coaching roles in the stenographic and history departments. They take the places of Miss Marguerite Lamar, who will teach at Kent State university in Ohio, and J. W. Brownrigg, who will study in Ypsilanti, Michigan.

Prominent cancer authorities from the entire world gather in Chicago for a convention and lecture series on the subject of the dread disease. Chief speaker at the affair is Sir Lenthal Cheate, Londoner, outstanding present-day authority on cancer causes, who grants an interview to Dorothy Carver and Barbara Fawcett. It is published in the Pageant—one of the half-dozen interviews Dr. Cheate grants while in Chicago.

Proviso takes the spotlight again, as news reaches the set of the victory of the 1936 Provi in winning All American honors. This is the third consecutive year a Proviso annual has won this award.

Upon the heels of the 1936 Provi's winning All American honors comes the announcement of the 1937 Provi staff by Miss Florence I. Otis, supervisor. Dorothy Carver draws top billing as editor-in-chief; Laura Campbell, department editor, supports

To commemorate Armistice Day, the school is run off on Tuesday, November 11. The program presented; the choir sings; a dramatic reading is given; a minute of silence, and "Taps" dismiss an impressive program. In recognition of the occasion, the entire cast takes a holiday on Wednesday.

As a part of Armistice Day, a week of special events is planned. The first event is November 10, at Open House. The first and sixth periods are in session. The entire procedure is carried on a normal basis. The Open House has a dual purpose. It follows the regular routine of the school, but also offers an opportunity for students to participate in physical education.

Another feature of this special week is the school assembly. All teachers in the town of New Bedford are invited to attend on November 12. More than four hundred teachers from all over the state are expected. For the week, Robert Skallerup and Jack Hudson, of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, will be in New Bedford.

From the beginning of the week, the school is in a festive mood. The students are in a happy mood. No examinations are given. The observance of National Education Week is a special occasion.

... day. They are entertained by a program based on the theme "Reading Interests of Our Youth" and "How We May Better Co-Operate in Service."

"Calling all books; calling all boys!" Proviso's student librarians are active during National Book week, as they always are. These students are preparing for college and future work.

Miss Florence I. Otis, supervisor of publications speaks on "Guiding Creative Youth" at the Chicago Interscholastic Press Guild. Nine Proviso journalism students attend the meeting.

Juniors follow their senior brethren into the limelight as they choose their council on September 30. Officers elected last year are to lead the class: Norbert Essig, president; Ted Groenke, vice-president; Alice Moffett, secretary; and Betty Rodger, treasurer. Junior class activities begin early, as members of the class swell their treasury by selling hot dogs, candy bars, pop corn, potato chips, chewing gum, and . . .

The first junior party is November 20. Ice cream and cake are served at a table decorated in yellow and brown, and music is provided by an all-girl orchestra, the Melodie Maids. Dance programs in yellow and brown, decorated with turkeys, carry out the Thanksgiving motif.

Not to be outdone by the upperclassmen, the sophomores begin to lay plans and plots for the coming year. Norval Zimmerman was elected next spring as chief executive; others sharing the spotlight include Ruth Grauman, Florene Bishop, Fred Bishop. Sophomore representative select next spring as official season for their formal party and plan to practice for the great occasion.

ing a series of smaller parties.

John Bolt, a freshman, is awarded honorable mention in a nation-wide contest sponsored by Current Science—national science magazine.

The ninth annual exhibition of paintings and sculpture presented by the Maywood Arts club in November. The first prize was won by Miss Wilhelmina Marm, of the art department.

Word comes that the poster of Burton Hendrickson, a junior, designed in connection with the Education week activities, has won first prize in the Lake Shore division of secondary schools. Loraine Rall and Florence Noffs won second and third places in Proviso's competition.

November 25 marks the first of the popular matinee dances of the year, as students flock to the gym long after all tickets have been sold.

The junior and senior Hi-Y's unite to present three twenty-minute Thanksgiving assemblies to the student body. Robed choir members move in solemn procession down the aisles, singing a Thanksgiving anthem to the music of the pipe organ, played by Miss Florence I. Otis; Norbert Essig reads a poem of Robert Service's; band members present "To the Colors," and "Taps" are played.

The true Thanksgiving spirit prevails at Proviso, as students fill baskets for the township's needy. More than one hundred seventy baskets, filled to overflowing with chickens, turkeys, potatoes, fruit crackers, cakes, bread, butter, and other foodstuffs delight the hearts and appetites of hungry families. Proviso faculty members and students go home for the Thanksgiving holidays with minds at peace and hearts serene.

ORGANIZATIONS

The brilliant glow of klieg lights and the babble of many voices in the background announce that Reel II of Part One is getting under way. It opens with snap views of after-school activities getting active. Clubs, dances, programs, and contests buzz busily about, banishing the gloom of Old Man Curriculum. Hundreds of ambitious students throw themselves with a will into their parts, eager for achievement. Directors, otherwise known as sponsors, step to the fore of each organization, with a group of selected officers acting as understudies.

of asking any student they choose from the register to help provide entertainment at meetings.

The Student Council first gets into the swing of the thing. It gained a flying jump on the other clubs when it elected its officers the previous spring. James Manton drew top billing. Supporting cast includes Robert Skallerup, vice-president, and Joyce Good fellow, secretary. Committee heads include Edward Huebner, traffic; Elmer Tolsted, scholarship; Jimmy Taylor, activities; Robert Knopf, citizenship; Gordon Seabrooke, clubs; and Barbara Fawcett, servi-

1. The first step is to identify the problem or question that needs to be addressed. This involves understanding the context and the specific requirements of the task.

2. Next, it is important to gather relevant information and resources. This may involve researching existing solutions, consulting with experts, or collecting data.

3. Once the information is gathered, the next step is to analyze it and identify the key factors that influence the outcome. This often involves breaking down the problem into smaller, more manageable parts.

4. After analysis, a plan or strategy should be developed. This plan should outline the steps that need to be taken to solve the problem, taking into account the resources available and the potential challenges.

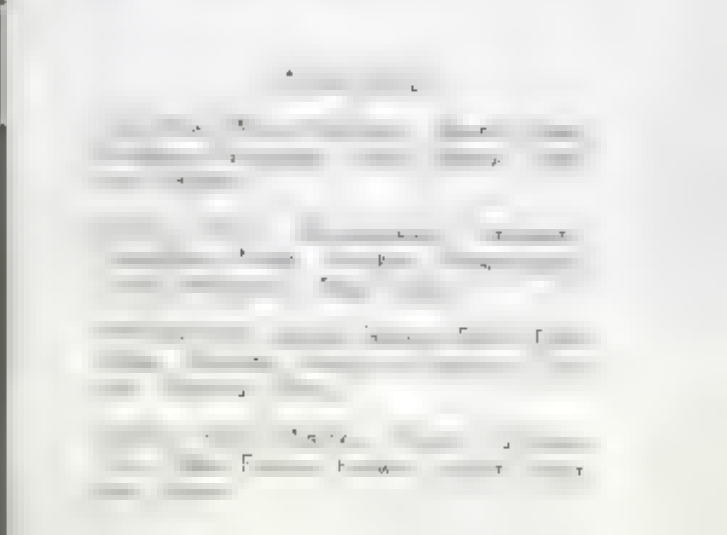

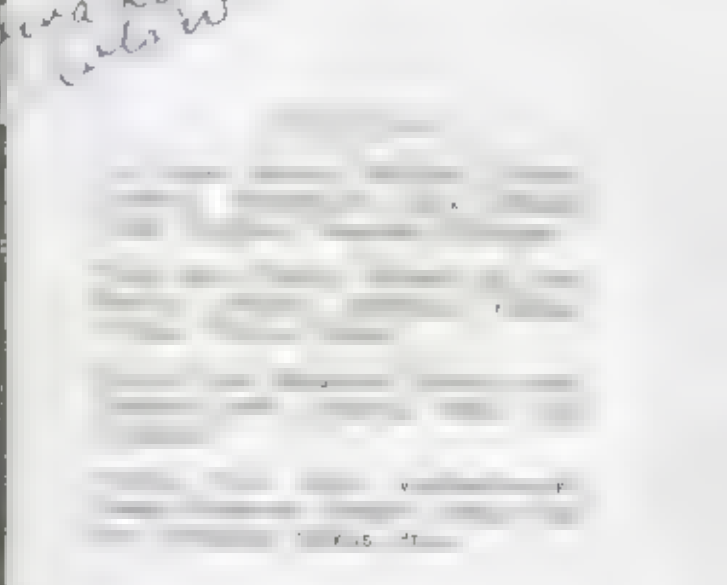

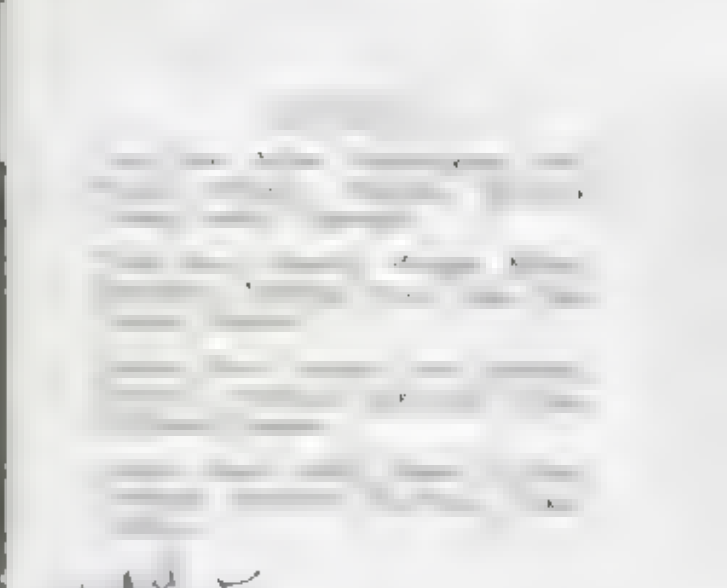

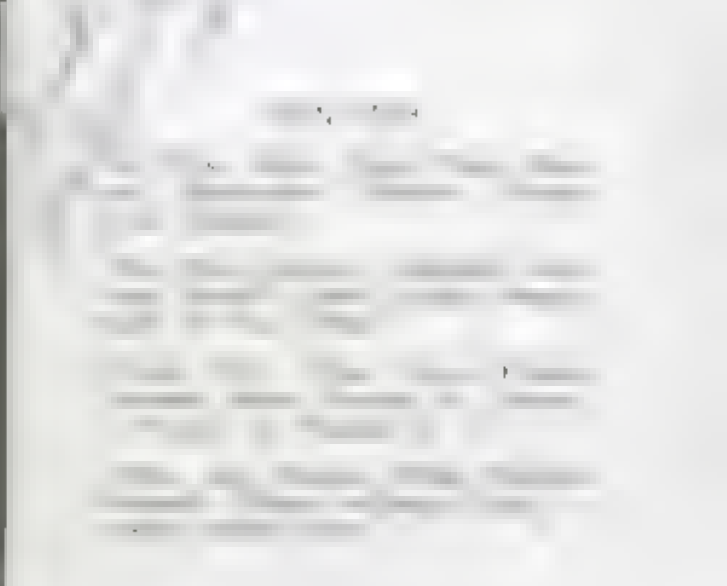

5. The final step is to implement the plan and monitor the progress. This involves putting the plan into action and regularly checking in to see how things are going. If necessary, adjustments should be made along the way.

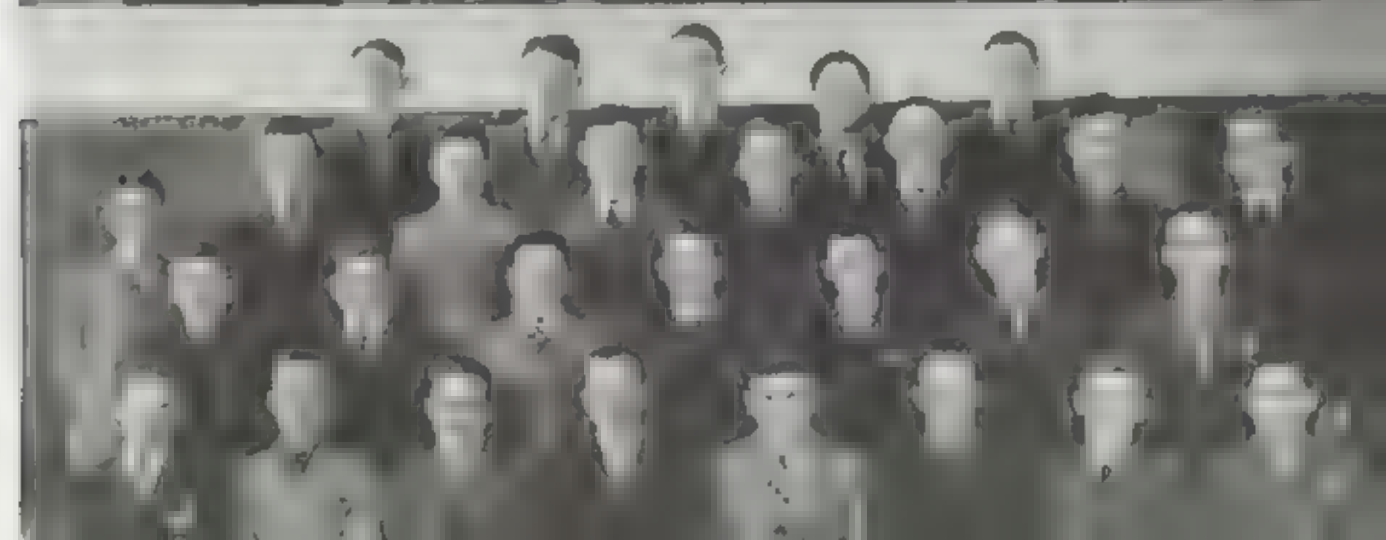

Quickly the scene shifts to the campus where students are hurrying around and making plans for the new clubs under the direction of the Student Council. First comes the announcement of the sport getting sign-up sheets. Twenty pupils are seen putting 'X's' on the dotted line of a petition book which is granted by the principal. Then the principal of United States history is seen in a classroom struggling over a book. Finally, a student is required of a teacher and is vaulted before the office. The scene ends with a student activity.

AND THEY CAN W

thwaite, Shirley Georges, and Arthur Sklar

"Calling all hams," "calling all hams," the radio club is organizing! Yup, the boys in the tower room are getting ready for another busy year. (For the uninitiated, "hams" is slang for amateur radio operators.) Twenty applicants are admitted on September

5, after passing an exam on radios given by the producer, D. B. Appleton. The "hams" compete to see how many far-away listeners they can pick up on their short-wave sets. Australia is the record. Leading roles in the radio division of this show go to Nick Kafka, Charles Remus, Robert Stever, and Robert Ruffier.

Other more or less scientifically minded students grab their share of the spotlight when they form the Senior Science club. E. W. Kochenderfer directs these budding experimenters. Just to prove that they really are geniuses, and not sons of the hot-potato trying to sneak in, members take two tests. Scientific demonstrations are given during the year, and an effort is made to increase the members' knowledge of various sciences and their application. Holding down top billing on the marquee this year are Lester Behrens, Gertrude Garrett, Nancy Clukas, Robert McEvoy, and Harold Merz, sergeant-at-arms.

Ninety students interested in the art of photography turn out for the first meeting on September 23. H. F. Johnson directing. Maunce Jacobs, Ruth Decker, Dorothy Parker, and Vernon Carne are leading lights of the dark room. The Camera club boasts four such rooms, completely equipped, allowing members to develop pictures for the cost of the paper.

Flash! A new math club for advanced students announced. Mathemagicians is the name, and November 9 is the day set for organizing. J. B. Davis appointed director. Triangles, octagons, rhombi and hexagons — all the brain teasers and torments of advanced mathematics — are expounded, dissected, and otherwise tossed about at meetings. Choice names among these mad mathematicians go to John John, Jeanette Wynne, Irene Seidel, Janet Nelson and Waller Swanson.

Beautiful flowers and soft music highlight the installation of officers and the induction of new members into the Senior Home Economics club in October. Stellar roles in the club this year go to Joan Holland, president; Luella Bohlander, secretary; Evelyn Knaack, treasurer; Margaret Hawkins, historian; and Dorothy Kinne, custodian. The Home Ec.ers are more of the lucky members who do not have to face the bugaboo of reorganization, as they are a national group. Problems of home management are discussed at their meetings. Miss Lola Pickles directing. She and Dorothy Kinne, '38, represent Proviso at the Illinois Home Economics conference at Quincy, October 30-31.

Following in the footsteps of their big sisters, the Junior Home Economics lassies come tripping into the picture on November 5, Miss Marie Oliver starring. Sub-stars include Anita Dorsey, Virginia Brakrog, Mary Semper, and Phyllis Johnson.

The new Commercial club has the distinction of becoming the first club this year to be formed by merging. Mixed up in it somewhere are the remains of the old Achievement and Commercial clubs. Robert Schlichting is chosen president of the composite organization. Henry Dubsky, Loretta Richardson, Eimer Osenberg, and Ray Knippenberg take Problems of the modern business world discussed at the meeting.

Attention, please! We have with us now one of the most popular and thrilling stage attractions in Provviso's athletic parade. This presentation, football, is the keynote of Reel III. It strikes a responsive chord in the hearts of countless spectators. A shooting schedule of twenty-eight "takes" is on the program for Provviso's elevens this season. However, football is not the only sport making its seasonal appearance; others are cross-country, intramural golf, and Girls' Athletic association activities.

Most of these big events will take place in the open air. Football games will be shown on home and foreign grounds; the cross-country meets will be run off in forest preserves and streets; and intramural golf participants will tee off at the Hillside golf course. The G. A. A. activities will have their own back yard, the school gym, and the swimming pool as settings.

In the main acts which follow, the coaches will be the experienced artists, with the players as beginners. The football staff is presenting a new cast of directors. S. O. Storby has been installed as head of the boys' athletic department. F. J. Hatley has been promoted from lightweight coach to lead the varsity team; O. H. Matte is once again varsity assistant. C. E. Kassel is head director of the light weights; L. F. Slimmer assists H. L. Rider as freshman mentor, with M. M. Wall as an understudy.

Two new characters in the coaching cast are C. E. Bryan and L. W. Soderberg, who are the junior varsity and assistant lightweight coaches.

Coach Hatley calls for prospects to report for football practice. Fifty-one aspirants report for the varsity eleven; four are lettermen. From these applicants Coach Hatley molds during the first two weeks of practice, a well-balanced cast.

The first game in Reel I is at Elmhurst, where the locals are held to a scoreless tie on a rain-soaked gridiron. The Provviso team plays before the Peoria Manual crowd on September 19, the contest marking the dedication of Manual's new field. Fifteen hundred rabid football fans turn out to witness the gala event. When the smoke has cleared away, Provviso has won its first victory, 20-0.

The setting of the next game on Provviso's "shooting schedule" is at New Trier. Torrents of rain greet the heavies as they attempt to win their first contest.

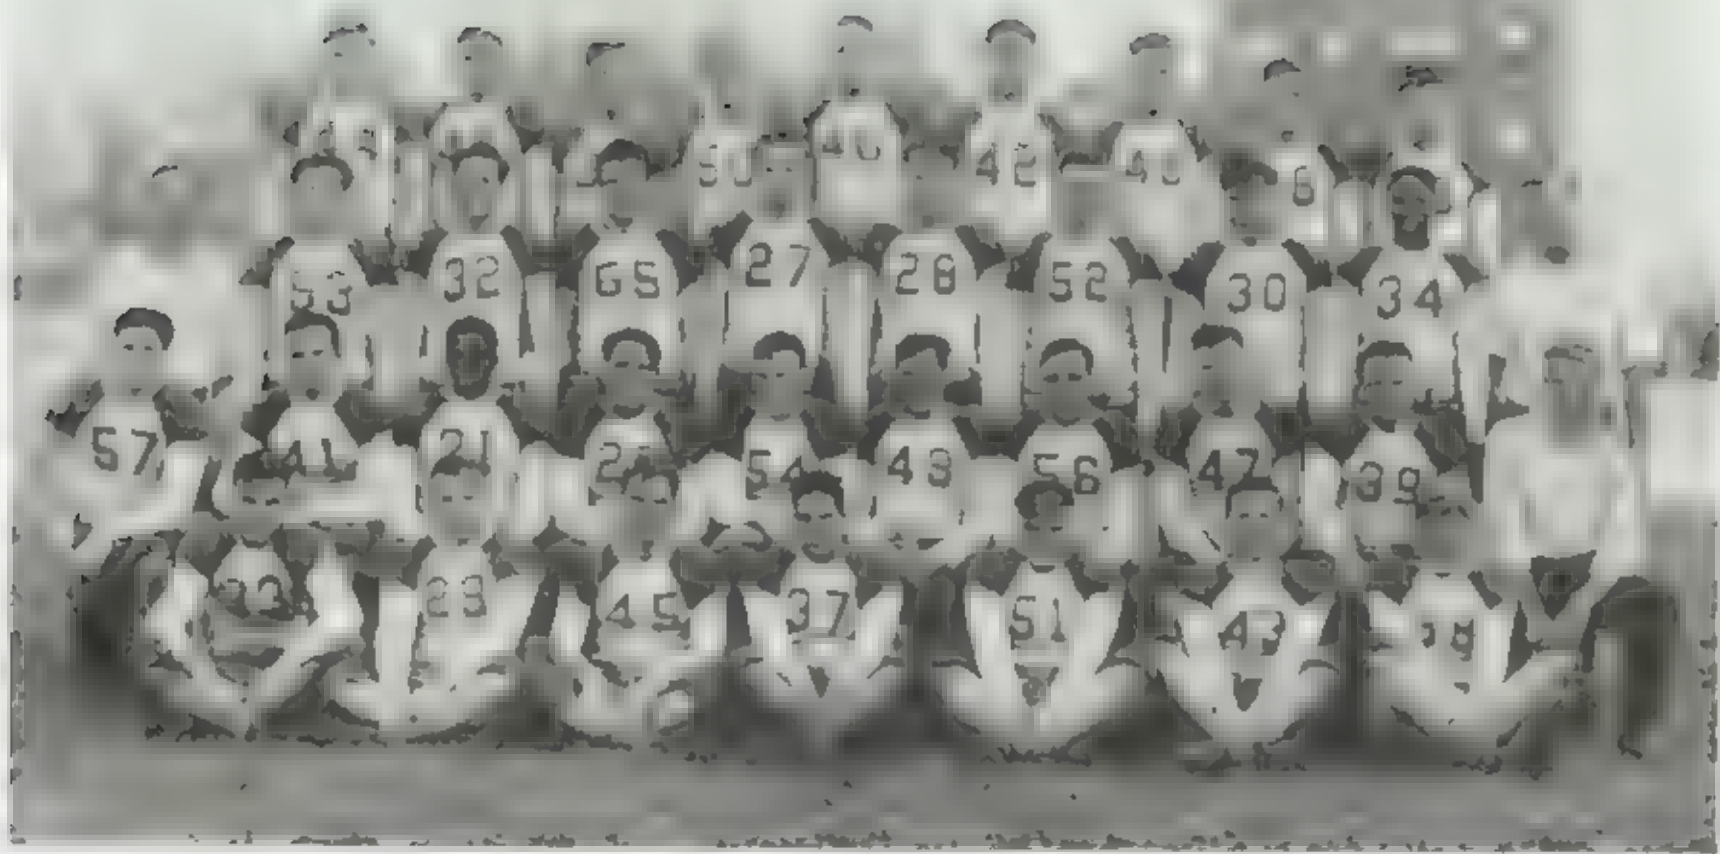

Rain or no rain, Director Hatley casts his cast on the field, and last year's state champions are trampled, 27-6, by an inspired aggregation. Mizen and Corbett are the actors who provide the margin of victory.

REEL III: SPORTS

THE FIRST REAL SNOW

THE SCHOOL

Script by Dorothy Carver

Reel I of Part Two, which covers a period of three months of school life, introduces a decided change in temperature. Players in "Proviso on Parade" that titanic, colossal vehicle of the century sit at the set with red noses and numb fingertips as the mercury drops to zero. Streets are icy; cruel wind howl fiercely. The cold reception lasts but a few days, however, and only occasionally can a little snow be seen on the ground. What that master photography, the studio head cameraman, has made look like a real snowfall is actually less than two inches deep.

The stars who will appear in this reel are principally members of the four mammoth ensembles, the classes. Now more seasoned than they were when production began, these players are steadily becoming more efficient in the intricate art of acting.

Dorothy Carver, editor-in-chief of the Provi, and Laura Campbell, Pageant editor, attend National Scholastic Press Guild conference held at the Book Cadillac hotel in Detroit the weekend of December 3-5, as representatives of the publication Proviso. Such notables as Christopher Morley gar A. Guest, Wallace Beery, Ben Bernie, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford are at the hotel. The convention is profitable, all in all.

Steps into the spotlight, as talent is and senior committee members are among the best of applicants for the editorial staff. Final appointments are announced by Miss Florence I. Otis, supervisor. Stars are Dorothy Carver, editor-in-chief; Laura Campbell, department editor; and Harry Guiney and Bruce Carson, associate editors. Arlene Vamek, Marvel Leming, and Emmett Henderson, assistants, also play featured roles, aided by a supporting cast of senior committee members with Natalie Plancino in charge. Anna Mae Corell is head of the clerical staff.

The music department presents members of all the classes in choir, choruses, band, and orchestra in a quadruple-billing Christmas concert at a P-T-A meeting on December 3. Further plans for the year's activities are made in the short business meeting which precedes the program. The P-T-A sponsors a Christmas drive for aiding Proviso's needy students through gifts of money, food, and clothing.

Other class members, some of the studio artists, are awarded sixteen season passes in a cover design contest for basketball and football. High honors in the football division go to John Bolt and Renor Faidy; in the basketball, to Erna Carnot, Renor Faidy, Henry Freiday, Harrison Hodes, Arthur McGovney, Edward Needham, Lois Frauenhoff, and Louise Barthel.

Reel II of the Christmas panorama continues, as all students are invited to attend the eleventh

OFF

The first of these is the fact that the system is not self-contained. It is not possible to determine the state of the system at any given time without knowing the state of the environment. This is because the system is not isolated from its surroundings. The system is always interacting with the environment, and this interaction can change the state of the system.

The second of these is the fact that the system is not deterministic. It is not possible to predict the future state of the system with certainty.
 This is because the system is subject to random fluctuations. These fluctuations can change the state of the system in a way that cannot be predicted.

The third of these is the fact that the system is not reversible. It is not possible to return the system to its original state after it has been changed. This is because the system is subject to irreversible changes. These changes
 can be caused by a variety of factors,
 including the interaction with the environment
 and the random fluctuations mentioned
 above.

The fourth of these is the fact that the system is not stable. It is not possible to maintain the system in a constant state. This is because the system is always changing. The state of the system is always evolving, and this evolution
 can be caused by a variety of factors,
 including the interaction with the environment
 and the random fluctuations mentioned
 above.

The fifth of these is the fact that the system is not predictable. It is not possible to predict
 the future state of the system with certainty.
 This is because the system is subject to random fluctuations. These fluctuations can change the state of the system in a way that
 cannot be predicted.

The sixth of these is the fact that the system is not controllable. It is not possible to control the state of the system. This is because the system is always changing. The state of the system is always evolving, and this evolution
 can be caused by a variety of factors,
 including the interaction with the environment
 and the random fluctuations mentioned
 above.

The seventh of these is the fact that the system is not observable. It is not possible to observe the state of the system. This is because the system is always changing. The state of the system is always evolving, and this evolution
 can be caused by a variety of factors,
 including the interaction with the environment
 and the random fluctuations mentioned
 above.

The eighth of these is the fact that the system is not measurable. It is not possible to measure
 the state of the system. This is because the system is always changing. The state of the system is always evolving, and this evolution
 can be caused by a variety of factors,
 including the interaction with the environment
 and the random fluctuations mentioned
 above.

The ninth of these is the fact that the system is not quantifiable. It is not possible to quantify
 the state of the system. This is because the system is always changing. The state of the system is always evolving, and this evolution
 can be caused by a variety of factors,
 including the interaction with the environment
 and the random fluctuations mentioned
 above.

The tenth of these is the fact that the system is not calculable. It is not possible to calculate the state of the system. This is because the system is always changing. The state of the system is always evolving, and this evolution
 can be caused by a variety of factors,
 including the interaction with the environment

1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This is often done through market research, which can involve surveys, focus groups, and other methods of gathering information from potential customers. Once a need has been identified, the next step is to develop a concept for a product that addresses that need. This concept should be based on the market research and should take into account the preferences and expectations of the target market.

2. The second step in the process is to develop a business plan. This plan should outline the goals and objectives of the new product, as well as the strategies for marketing and distributing it. It should also include a detailed financial forecast, showing the expected costs and revenues of the product over a period of time. The business plan is a crucial document for securing financing and for guiding the development of the product.

3. The third step in the process is to develop a prototype of the product. This is a physical model of the product that can be used to test its design and functionality. The prototype should be built using the materials and components that will be used in the final product. It should be tested in a way that simulates the conditions in which it will be used, and the results of the testing should be used to refine the design and improve the product.

4. The fourth step in the process is to conduct a pilot test of the product. This is a small-scale test in which the product is distributed to a limited number of customers, and their feedback is used to make further improvements. The pilot test should be conducted in a way that allows for the collection of detailed information about the product's performance and the satisfaction of the customers. The results of the pilot test should be used to make final adjustments to the product and to develop a marketing strategy for the full-scale launch.

5. The fifth and final step in the process is to launch the product. This involves distributing the product to the target market and promoting it through various marketing channels. The launch should be planned carefully, taking into account the timing and location of the distribution, as well as the promotional activities that will be used to attract customers. The success of the launch will depend on the quality of the product, the effectiveness of the marketing strategy, and the responsiveness of the target market.

At intervals during the year, various assemblies are presented by organizations of the school. Among the speakers at these assemblies is Fred, by, executive secretary of the National Association for the Prevention of War, who will also on Parade" can. His subject in his speech is "The Threat of War and What We Can Do About It."

Several other important speeches are given in the community during the first of Reel I of Part Two. Hooting off the set begins when students are invited to attend the opening forum of the Boys' and Girls' conferences of Proviso and Oak Park, which is held at the First Congregational church of Oak Park. Dr. David Seabury, New York psychologist, speaks on "What Makes Us All So Queer." Many of Proviso's juvenile players go and learn, and several members of the faculty coaching group are seen in the audience, covering.

"Telling the truth about war is the only way to prevent it," answers Dr. Louis L. Mann to the question "War—Is There No Way Out?" when he speaks at the Junior Institute on World Conference banquet in Oak Park. Many Proviso students are in attendance.

In direct contrast, civil war wages in Spain. The romantic old country is laid to waste by brother fighting brother in blood.

More world news. While the people enjoy a mild winter, word comes from the middle states. War is raging, people drown, starve, and are ruined. Suffering is everywhere. SPORTS

Script by Harry Guiney

Reel I of Part Three brings to the camera focus new sports in "Proviso on Parade." The headliner for the three-months' season is basketball, which is supplemented by wrestling and swimming. Old Man Winter is threatening cold weather just around the corner, so all takes must be made indoors. Back grounds are home and other schools' gyms, swimming pools, and wrestling mats.

Action starts with a bang, as S. O. Storby begins his second year as head director. The Proviso basketball machine snaps into action with daily rehearsals. Immediately after the football program has ended. For the second time, H. L. Rider is Mr. Storby's right hand man. Together they drill many try-out-ers who hope to be a part of the cast that will be presented before a home audience on November 25, when Lemont engages the locals in the opening act of the reel.

Five experienced lettermen return, and the directors build the team from this quintet, picking more players from the aspirants. Colossal class is exhibited against Lemont, and the Pirates emerge victorious, 32-22. The next encounter is a league contest at Morton on December 4. Beginning a defense of its league title, the Proviso cast marches out on the Maroon stage, does its playing successfully, bows before an overflow theater and walks off the set, a 28-21 winner.

The next game is at home with New Trier, after one week has elapsed. New Trier receives the same treatment as Morton 38-19. Highland Park invades the local setting on December 18, and is shot, 38-22. The following six acts take place downstate at Beardstown, Quincy, and Pontiac. The latter is the Pontiac tournament, in which only the most talented casts of the state are entered. Beardstown and Quincy draw negatives, and Proviso literally runs away with the Pontiac tourney, except in its final performance, when it takes Centralia down the line 33-29, on January 1.

After winning the spoils at Pontiac, the Pirates travel to the Evanston set one week later and win their eleventh straight victory, 41-24. When Oak Park comes to town on January 15, Proviso "goes to town" and performs brilliantly under the floodlights to outshine its opponents, 38-21. Waukegan plays host to the Blue-and-Whites next, but proves the "thirteenth guest" of the defending league champs 35-22. This play completes the first round of the league program. The second and last part starts at Proviso on January 29, with Morton. The latter does not shine on the former's lot, and as a result loses again to Director Storby's outfit, 28-18.

New Trier and Highland Park are sent to the dark-room on foreign settings early in February. The scene shifts to Proviso on February 9, when Evanston absorbs another negative, 30-21.

Coach Storby practices intensely with his players now, because Moline, one of the strongest ententes in the state, is to be played on February 12, away from home. With Heileman starring as the hero, Proviso leaves the lot with a 35-25 success.

After this win, Coach Storby leads his cast to Oak Park, where it wins its nineteenth consecutive victory, 33-26. The following week the Blue-and-White squad performs before a home crowd against Waukegan and takes the engagement, 41-16 to defend successfully its Suburban League title. Because this positive shot has brought to a close the regular shooting schedule, the team is now practicing for the Regional Tournament at York in Elmhurst, on March 3.

Proviso takes its first engagement with ease against Downers Grove, but on March 5, Morton is paired with the locals. Playing with all their ability, both casts battle toe to toe, with the Pirates having some advantage in talent, 26-24. In the finals, the winners 33-29, to capture the tournament.

Next part of the program, the Sectional Tournament, is held at Waukegan on March 11. Be-

FRESH SOPH BASKETBALL

A new featured star is making his initial appearance at Proviso in the role of a basketball director. C. E. Bryan has been given the task of producing material for future varsity use. With the aid of his assistant, I. W. Soderberg, he begins practice in the middle of November with a large group of freshmen and sophomores.

Enough rehearsals have been held for the team to go out and trim Lamont on November 25, the first successful performance of the season. This is the only practice till on the fresh-sophomore schedule, so only league quintets remain to be played.

On December 4, Proviso's group travels to Morton to play the Maroons in the first Suburban League contest. The home team hands the locals a 19-9 defeat, and the following week, New Trier invades the Blue-and-White setting. The invaders are disappointed at their showing, because they blow in Proviso's lights, and escape with a 20-7

two defeats, Coach Bryan molds his defensive unit, and the next time out, the actors get back into the good graces of the audience by beating Highland Park, 14-10, for their second victory. On January 8, Evanston jumps into the highlights when it ekes out a 21-19 triumph over local stars on the W.Lakit stage.

Villain Oak Park and Waukegan are dueled in that order, resulting in the former's coming off the lot a 38-22 victor, and the latter taking a 22-16 performance from the Proviso players.

Because of [redacted] defeats, Director Bryan sends his thwarted proteges through strenuous practices. [redacted] engagement on January 29. Although [redacted] w is not successful the fresh-sophs [redacted] w-goers" in losing a very close 24-22 affair. The next shot, at New Trier on February 2, also proved to be a defeat, 33-30, but not until after the future [redacted] rs have scared the socks off the home team.

Three days elapse before the next act. Highland Park is met on its own stage in a return engagement and sends the Proviso cast from the set with a 15-12 loss. Not enough flash is exhibited at home against Evanston, on February 9, by the totted "straightshooters," and as a result, the opponents emerge with a 30-22 success.

The setting changes to Oak Park's stage the following week, but the lights still do not seem bright enough for the local players; the Parkers prove a hit once more in shooting Director Bryan's cast. 39-22

In the final scene of the team's thirteen-act program, the freshmen ring down the curtain of a somewhat dismal season with zest that brings applause galore from the "sardine can" theater, when they show Waukegan the way to the dark room 27 23

The next play arrives here on February 6 with strong downstate Lewistown as the opposition. Putting on a triumphant performance, the state champs take the scenario, 20½ 9½. The next scene takes place at Morgan Park on February 17. Rising to colossal heights, the squad hands the Parkers a one-way ticket to the darkroom, 42-0.

After rehearsing for another week, Lindblom enters the local picture on the Proviso stage, and before a packed theater is downed, 27-9.

From now on the squad rehearses overtime in order to improve its talent for the state meet on March 5 and 6. Director Slimmer leads the cast into Champaign and each of the actors performs in a stupendous manner to defend successfully the state title. The final tabulation shows the local stars with a grand total of 29 points, eight more than runner-up Champaign.

Three individual Proviso actors exhibit more talent than any one else in the meet to win the state championship in their respective weights. Bishop, Schmidt, and Seabrooke are the featured stars of Director Slimmer.

The first of these was the formation of the M. J. C.
 Club, which was organized in the fall of 1911. The purpose of this club was to provide a place where the students could meet and discuss the various subjects which were being taught in the school. The club was very successful in its first year, and it has since become one of the most popular organizations in
 the school.

Another important event
 in the history of the school was the opening of the new building in 1912. This building was the first of its kind in the district, and it provided a much larger and more comfortable place for the students to study. The building was named after the first principal of the school, and it has since become a landmark in the community.

last regular concert on March 14. "Symphony in D Minor," by Cesar Franck, required number for the national competition at Columbus, Ohio, brings the program to an exultant climax. Selections from Liszt, Tchaikowsky, Paganini, and Ippolitow-Iwanow show the scope of the orchestra's repertoire. The conductor, Mr. Osburn directing, helps make this last concert one of the most musical and inspirational of the year.

Spring is here, spring is here! Hi-Y-ers take a hint from the weather and present "One Frightened Night" as their annual movie. This nerve-tingling, hair-raising, scream-filled melodrammer comes on March 25. The menu for the day calls for a sports reel and cartoon for dessert, and an unusual game, Hi-Y-O is played, the winners being awarded free copies of the 1937 Provi-

Varsiteers go through another session of Chinese torture, all for the sake of wearing a big "P" on their chests. These studs, the second batch this semester to get initiated, go through the "mill" on April 16. Just so there won't be rebellion in the ranks, club big-wigs hold up the promise of the event of the year, the Varsity club dance on May 21.

Pep club members sell tickets to their movie, proceeds of which are to be used to help meet expenses of a basketball and wrestling banquet to be given in April.

ATHLETICS

All right, all right; we know that the basketball troupe has put on a stupendous performance, but the forecast of the baseball cast looks just as colorful. But first, the program of March is to be shown. It is composed of the beginning of the track and baseball seasons. D. B. Appleton and O. H. Matte are the featured stars in baseball and track, respectively. The setting of each sport will be indoors, but only during the month of March, which is probably the quietest period in the nine months sports program.

Baseball enthusiasts report to rehearse for the contest with Oak Park as the setting, on March 15. The contest finishes fifth, with New Trier taking the

On March 15, Director Matte calls for his track characters, but because of lack of practice facilities, they are slow in limbering up. Several lettermen are returning to brighten the team's prospects for another good season.

Sports are taken on March 23 of the best talented actors among the Junior and Senior classes. In the first round the Juniors bow to the upperclassmen. The overflow audience, 26-13, while the tactful audience is in the finale, 14-12.

GOING UP!
OCHS!

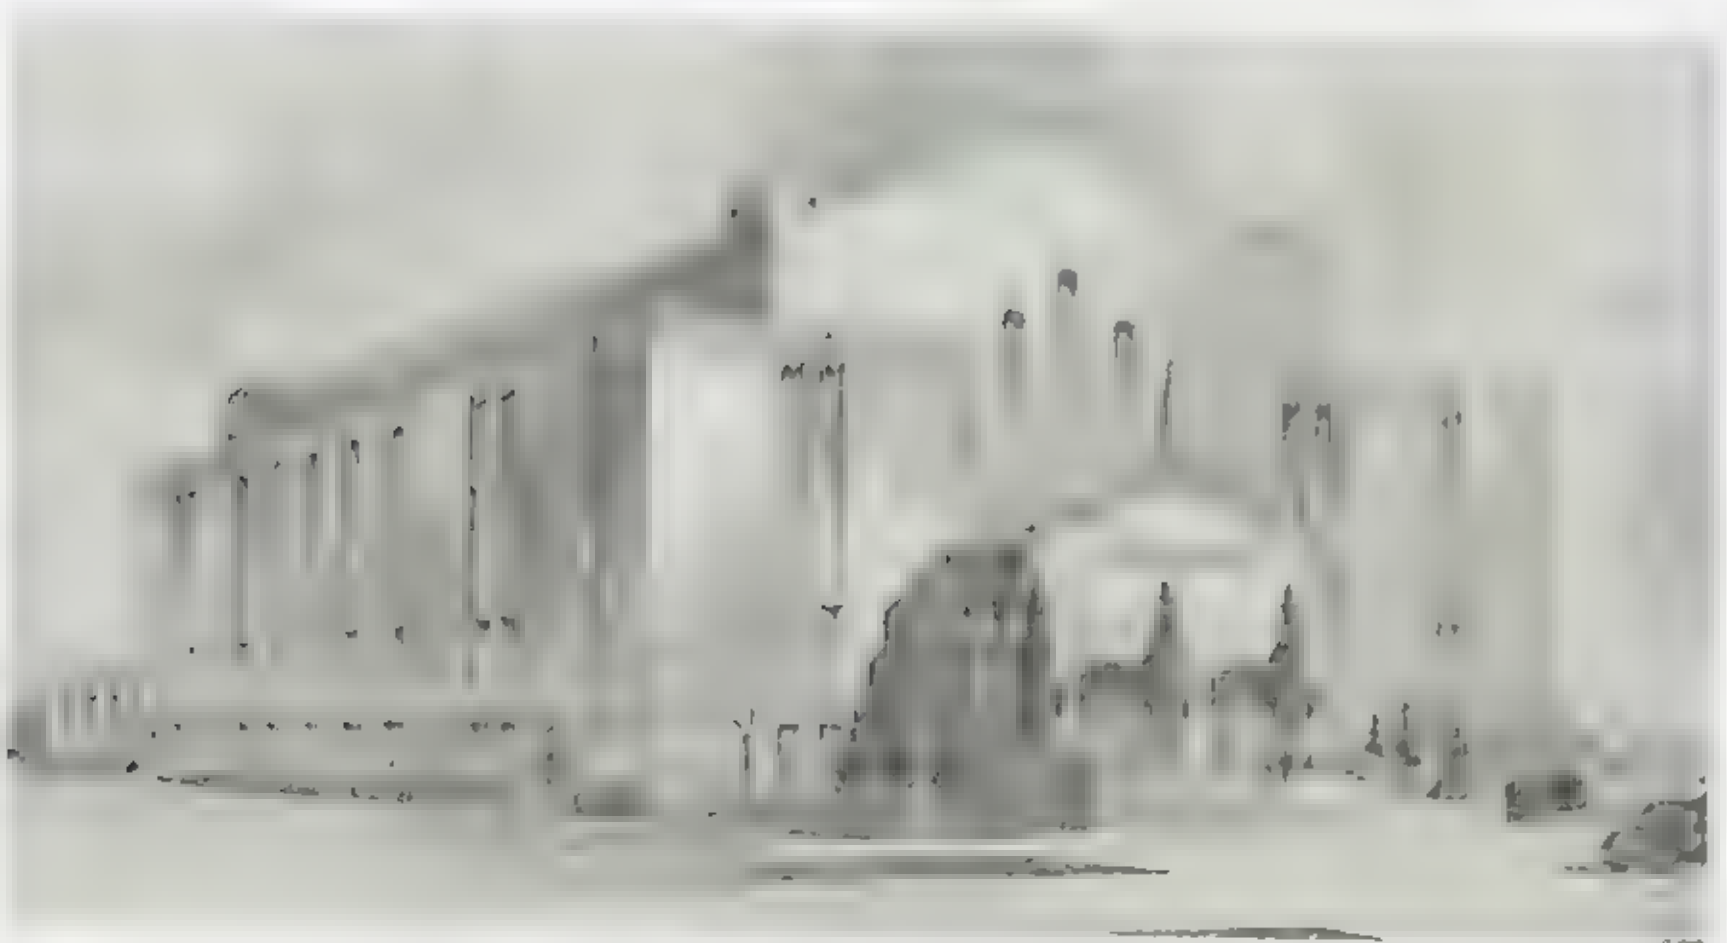

Because Lane Tech, city champ, is on the baseball program for April 10, Director Appleton calls his players in March to direct them in rehearsals for the tough campaign coming up. Each of his actors, with seven returning veteran stars, drills in the gymnasium for three weeks before the opening play.

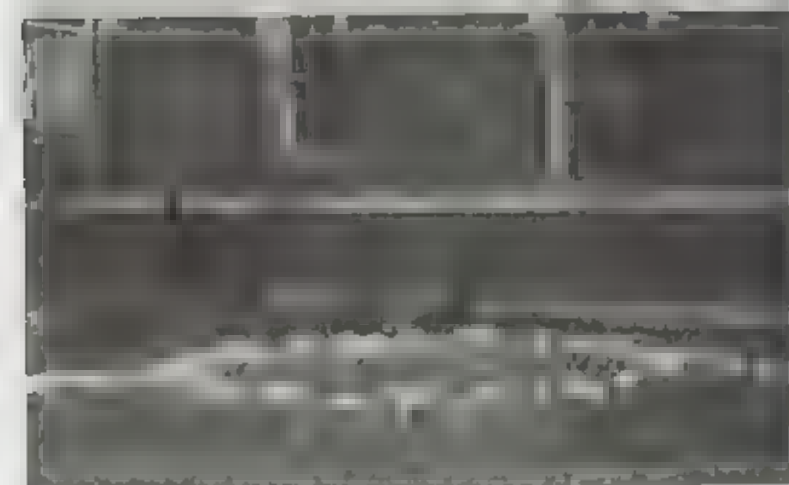

The personnel of this year's ball cast includes seven characters who have had previous experience. The infield seems well fortified with players Grove, Pelleter, and Merrill composing the battery. Aid will be given by two other pitching actors, namely, Graf and Surges. Three fielding artists are in line for feature parts, with Sampson, Guiney, and Ermisch forming the nucleus of the infield. D'Anza will fill in at shortstop to team with the other three to give Proviso the best infield in the Suburban league. The outfield seems to be the weakest part of the team, but Miller, Stackpool, and Bubis are out for hero jobs in those positions.

1. The first step is to identify the problem or goal. This involves understanding the current situation and what needs to be achieved.

2. Next, it is important to gather information and resources. This includes researching the problem, identifying stakeholders, and determining what tools and materials are needed.

3. Once the information is gathered, the next step is to develop a plan. This involves setting priorities, creating a timeline, and assigning responsibilities.

4. After the plan is developed, it is time to implement it. This involves executing the tasks, monitoring progress, and making adjustments as needed.

5. Finally, the project should be evaluated. This involves assessing the results, identifying lessons learned, and determining if the goal was achieved.

She is one of the world an journalists, now traveling through the States on tour, giving speeches at various schools and universities throughout this country. Frau Kaiser was brought to Proviso through the of her friend, Miss Helen Grant Norman, English department.

A new player comes to the Proviso. Mrs. M. W. Winters, an alumna, and Mrs. Esther Connors, formerly attendance worker, are new.

Financial controversies wage hot a school board. John M. Newmer is chosen for the coming year, and Emery A. Partridge is elected secretary.

The last P.T.A. meeting of the year is April 22. The program features a style show, in which models are girls from the clothing classes, who model garments they have made themselves. Another highlight of the evening is the debate by the school's champ squad. Also featured are the girls of the choir, under the direction of R. Lee Osburn, who sing a group of choral numbers. Thus, the P.T.A. program is brought to a climax, and activities for the 1936-37 school year are over.

Proviso stars again, as all three members of the contest play cast, which enters the state dramatics tournament late in April, are awarded all-star cast. The girls—all juniors—are Barbara Daniels, Louise Greenwell, and Roberta Holmer. Miss Emily Reid, of the English department, is head coach of the prize-winning play.

Juniors and seniors frolic together at their annual dancing party on April 23, which is sponsored by the seniors. Refreshments are served in the social room, and dancing is in the gym.

Sophomores come in for their share of festivities on the next evening, Saturday, April 24. This is the largest sophomore event of the year, the only eve-party these students enjoy.

Members of the Proviso art and business staffs are busy at work, the art staff at making the Proviso artistically beautiful and the business staff at soliciting advertisements.

Under the direction of Miss Eileen White, is also laboring diligently at its task of providing a hand of information pertaining to Proviso for next year's students.

On April 27, all feminine players in the cast are at a Girls' League event for the purpose of electing to introduce candidates for offices in the coming year. The next day, all girls vote on the candidates, and the winners are Jeanne Betts and Jeanne Betts.

March 28-29. Colossal Members of the Thespians stage a rollicking comedy "Station Y-Y-Y-Y." Watch the cast as it goes through a scene, and you'll see that its members have improved. Not to be outdone by this club, the sophomore class as a whole presents the season's second play, "Exchange."

A treat for you! Take a look at all those boys reporting to the athletic field. Yes; they're going sports-minded, and are out to make a name for themselves in football, basketball, and track. There are several muscle-men on the field now; look closely and you'll recognize Dave Buck, Steve Mizen, Pete Sagalewich, and Rich Cronin.

Lights, music, and song! The sophomores are getting a real thrill tonight (May 11), as they witness their first big party of the year. From their smiling faces you can see that they're glad to be "just sophomores."

One more year gone! School closes for the summer vacation today. The Class of 1937 looks forward to still greater scenes on some future lot

TIME MARCHES ON!

Hello! Your news correspondent back again to bring you scenes in the lives of the juniors. Cast your glances upon our friends of the Class of 1937. They look sure of themselves, don't they? After all, they're upperclassmen now.

Election time! The junior nominating committee is now presenting its report to the class, and before you are some of the candidates for office. Let's listen to James Felt as he presents his platform:

"I'll do my best to make the third year the finest for Class 1937. If I can, I'll make the Prom the best affair we've ever had."

Evidently the juniors are in favor of him; listen to the applause. And here is the final ballot: James Felt, president; Ellen Williams, Carol Parker, and Marben Carstens, assistants.

World of sports! Many junior boys are out on that football field fighting for the school against Oak Park. These boys ought to be bright stars next season, even if they didn't win today. Keep your eye on them!

World of social events! Look at those tantalizing Thanksgiving baskets. The whole school is sending them to cheer some families which can't afford a real Thanksgiving dinner. You'll recognize some of the "delivery boys" as our friends of '37

Remarkable! Here are the charming Tatterman Marionettes presenting "The Glowing Bird" to Proviso. Notice how life-like the tiny figures are as they move about the stage.

Juniors get their big chance! Those who studied news writing are now ready to be taken on to the Pageant staff. Take a glimpse at their determined faces as they start their jobs. If they make good this semester, maybe there will be something better for them next year.

Biggest week of the year! Watch those junior girls exchanging notes and gifts with their "pals." Let's hear what Lesley McBride, second vice-president of the Girls' League, has to say about this event

"I feel as the other junior girls do; that 'Pal week' is the main event of the year. It's tops in fun and frolic."

Stupendous performance! The G. A. A. show for 1936 takes the prize as the best show of its kind. In the spotlight you'll see Aleta Baron, Muriel Bull, Ralph Buyer, Alwin Foleno, Helen MacPhail, Lorraine Rail, Bill Ramsay, Arlene Vanek, and Miriam Walker, all of the Class of '37.

Seniors and juniors mix! The "mixer," one of the most popular dances of the year, scores a success. Listen to the strains of Ray Lee's orchestra, and watch those socialites sway to the rhythm.

History in the making! Here is a part of the solemn ceremony for National Honor Society installation. Ten juniors can be seen on the stage. Look closely and you'll spot Mary Grace Alden, Marion Boeger, Laura Campbell, Bruce Carson, Judith Cleland, Hobart Lande, Jean Parchmann, Catherine Rocca, Henry Schmidt, and Elmer Tolsted.

Event of the year! The Prom swings off to a merry start. Juniors rise to the occasion as hosts and hostesses and give the seniors a time they'll long remember. Look at the dazzling gowns and flowers on the girls. Here comes Ellen Williams, vice-president of the junior class, to say a few words:

"Having a fine time; wish you were here."

Maybe those juniors who are missing this party will put on their dancing shoes next year.

Something for the girls! Twenty-six members of the fairer sex are elected to the Senior Guard in their third year. The installation, as you can see, is very moving. Look at the beautiful flowers that adorn the new president of the league, Camilla Edbrooke. Marian Boeger, Betty Wade, Elaine Werninghaus, and Marian Robb are her helpers.

Election returns! Henry Schmidt, newly elected president of the class, will now give you his report: "Those selected to work with me next year are Lesley McBride, Judith Cleland, and Paul Yates. We'll try to make the year a record one."

The last day of school! By the sober expression, you'd think these juniors were actually sorry to complete the year. They're all looking forward to the time when they'll be seniors.

TIME MARCHES ON

More than a hundred sixty seniors salute the school. The senior is king this year! Many hands can be seen today, as they return to knowledge.

Christmas in the car! "Why the Chimes Rang" presented by Proviso Players the day before Christmas vacation. The gleaming altar, colorful costumes, and thoughtful acting bring the Christmas spirit into the audience's heart.

On to victory! The Proviso Pirates win the Pontiac Tourney, and bring home the cup. The team almost won last year, and they didn't let the honor get away this time. Let's give the Pirates the hand they deserve

D.A.R. Award given! Laura Campbell wins the high honor, given on the basis of dependability, service, leadership, and patriotism. Laura says: "I feel very fortunate in winning such an award, and I thank all the senior girls and faculty members who voted for me."

Banquet for Pirates! The Pep Club sponsors this spectacular gathering for the basketball and wrestling teams. The cafeteria, decorated to represent a pirate ship, is the last word in originality. Sitting about the tables you see Rich Cronin, Hank Heileman, Dave Buck, Steve Mizen, and Pete Sagalewich, the seniors who have played their last game for the Proviso fans. The wrestlers are Henry Schmidt, Art McGovney, Lawrence Willson, Leo Conners, Vernon Collard, and Harold F.

The greatest honor of all! Seventy-five more members of the Class of '37 are elected to National Honor society; these added to the nine elected last year make a total membership of eighty-four in this class. Those on the left side of the stage are the twenty who went in automatically for scholarship. The sixty-odd on the right are those who were voted upon. Yes, these seniors have accomplished something great this time.

Pre-view showing! "Monsieur Beaucaire" is the title of the drama-comedy now being enacted for you. Loraine Rail and Robert Knopf are the leading characters. Listen to the spectators as they demand curtain calls for the cast.

A ship-load of "good fellows!" Good Fellowship week is sailing smoothly along with Marian Boeger at the helm. Marian says:

"This is the senior girls' last chance to get acquainted with each other, and you can see that they're taking advantage of the opportunity."

Seniors score again! This time as guests, they are on the receiving end as the juniors make them at home at the Prom. From what we can see, nearly every one of the senior sophisticates is here, enjoying his last party. Most of the guests are staying until the orchestra leaves, in order to make the Prom last as long as possible.

Gold medalers! Scattered somewhere over the set are the following medal winners: Frank Behrendt, Marian Boeger, Evelyn Boyd, Laura Campbell, Mildred Capling, Erna Carnot, Bruce Carson, Anna Catenacci, Judith Cleland, Arthur Holland, Ruth Kaul, Irma Lang, Hobart Lande, Myrtle Milles, Elma Puscheck, Edward Richter, Henry Schmidt, Elsie Slotky, and Elmer Tolsted.

Biggest splash party of the year! As the senior girls give their places in the Girls' League to younger members, there is a free flow of tears from both participants and the audience. This service is very affecting; as the organ strains of "Estrallita" fall on the girls' ears, tears drip.

Flash! The event of all events! Graduation night is the final feature on the calendar. Listen to the marching feet of the boys and girls before you. Look at their faces, and you'll see that ninety nine per cent of them are thoughtful. Henry Schmidt sums up their feelings:

"I speak for the whole Class of 1937, when I say that we thank Proviso for all it has done for us, and we are sorry to leave its doors forever."

CLASS POEM

By Arlene Vanek

The flowers outdid themselves one spring
In England, Germany, and France
The wind, in his wild autumn dance
Said, "I'll transport on airy wing
These seeds." He tossed them o'er the sea,
O'er mountains, valleys, country lanes,
And followed them with gentle rains,
And so our Garden came to be

These elements from far lands grew
Within this country bright and strong
Though each still sang his native song,
All sang America's anthem, too
It made no difference from what land
These many strangers made their way;
All grew together day by day,
And worked together, hand in hand

And now today Fate sends away
Those who have called Proviso home,
To scatter far 'neath Heaven's dome
As each one goes his separate way.
But though they hold that "Man is man,
And master of his fate," they know
That wheresoever they may go,
They follow still some destined plan.

WISHES

By Arlene Vanek

I asked for a cloak of the finest of plush;
Instead, I was wrapped in the evening's soft hush.

I begged for bright diamonds made into a bar,
But I was content with a twinkling star

I wanted a gown, just the picture of grace
I took, instead, the moonbeam's pale lace

I loved a warm blanket of colorful hue;
I had one of night mist lined with sweet dew.

Soft music was mine as I danced down the lane,
But music that came from the tinkle of rain.

I wanted rich perfume to treasure with care;
The perfume I smelled was the spring in the air.

I wanted your smile and the nod of your head;
How can I be happy with nothing instead?

THE WORLD COMES TO PROVISO

By Natalie Piacino

This is the age of steel! Automobiles, airplanes, streamlined trains, and skyscrapers would be impossible without it. Our present-day civilization may almost be said to be erected upon a foundation of steel.

But steel, like other metals, is an alloy. Iron, in its original form, is too soft to be useful. But when mixed with chromium, which will not rust, it results in the finished product of stainless steel—durable, majestic, beautiful. Iron mixed with tungsten makes steel which will remain hard at red heat, and tools which do the work of the world at speeds faster than ever attained before. On the other hand, iron combined with carbon, the chief constituent of coal, results in steel which is very hard, but brittle. Scarcely any of our large industries requiring the use of steel would be possible today if it were not for the invention of various alloy steels. Each of them differs slightly from the others as necessary to meet the uses to which each will be put. Even gold and silver must be mixed with copper in order to make them hard enough to use for coins and jewelry. In view of these points, then, we can truly say this is an Age of Alloys.

It may well be said that in Proviso, there exists the beginning of such alloys. Forty different nationalities may be compared to the various metals. Each has some definite contribution to the whole, each adds something that strengthens or beautifies. The English exactness, the Italian love for music, the French flair for fashions, the German thriftiness, the Spanish exuberance—all are mixed and blended together in the up-and-coming melting pot that is Proviso. This school is the laboratory, the foundry in which these characteristics will be tested, molded, welded, and forged. Each national trait must be added in just the right proportion; all waste materials must be discarded; the finished product must be perfectly refined. It must be durable to withstand stress of adversity; it must be strong, like stainless steel, to withstand the corrosion of false propaganda; and it must be elastic to spring back after temporary strain.

To illustrate these points, let us present some actual facts concerning the nationalities of the Class of '37. Twenty-two seniors were born in foreign lands: Lydia Wolff, Paul Nellen, Erica Jantzen, Werner Laue, Irma Etzien, Hilda Ewert, Gerhard Vogt, and Gerda Von Gehr, Germany; Edward Knorning, Japan; Lesley McBride, India; Tony Caliendo and Natalie Piacino, Italy; Erik Roos, Denmark; George Alles, Greece; Doris Watkins, Thomas Ellison, and Albert Elaridge, England; Helen MacPhail, Leo Connors, Walter Keillor, Lawrence Willson, Canada; Nick Kafka, Roumania.

Although Germany takes the lead with students, Russia maintains the record for the highest number of seniors' parents born there. Parents of thirty seniors were born in Russia, twenty-nine in Germany, twenty-four in Italy, fourteen in Lithuania, eleven in Poland, nine in Austria, eight in England, five in Hungary, and fewer than five in Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Holland, Scotland, Norway, Greece, Latvia, Canada, Yugoslavia, France, Switzerland, and Ireland. Only in cases where both parents were born abroad have they been included in this list.

Visitors from all over the world bring direct contact with peoples from foreign lands to students in Proviso. In the past few years, fifteen persons have spoken to the students, bringing new ideas and new viewpoints for discussion. Dr. Mathew Cable and Miss Jeannie Hume from New Zealand; Dr. Gordon Rowell and Dr. Gordon Saggars from Australia; Dr. Robert Hunt from England; Baroness Monica Von Miltz and Mrs. Margarete Harnisch Kaiser, from Germany; Dr. Lici Weiss and Dr. Paul Dengler from Austria; Dr. Harbans Lae, from India; Misses Louise and Hazel Chou, from China; Miss Hatsu Imajo, from Japan; Giuseppe Castruccio and Miss Rosa Ransa, from Italy—all have made definite contributions to the cosmopolitan spirit of Proviso.

What is true of Proviso is true in still greater measure of America as a whole. She is a composite of many races and many cultures. For a generation or two, those who come from foreign lands tend to settle in communities with others of their kind, to persist in the use of their mother tongue, and to publish newspapers in that tongue. But by the time the next generation comes to maturity, racial characteristics and differences begin to disappear; from diverse sources, a new type emerges, the American of the future. Just what that type will be, no one can predict. But that it will discard the less desirable and retain the more valuable traits of each element, is to be profoundly hoped.

Meanwhile, in Proviso and in hundreds of other schools throughout the land, the blending process goes on. In that process, tolerance of an alien point of view, understanding, sympathy, and kindness are of inestimable value. The Provi of 1937 seeks to increase the operation of those qualities in Proviso by the use of world citizenship as its theme.

INTERNATIONAL MAIL BOX

Fan mail, fan mail everywhere! Keeping in step with Hollywood, "Proviso on Parade" presents its own pocket-sized edition of a fan mail bag. Taylor and Garbo may boast of their thousands of letters, but the local cast has truly an international following. England, France, Japan, and many points east and west contribute their bit to the flood of international good will heading toward Proviso.

Many of the customs and experiences of foreign students are related here, along with their views and opinions on current problems of the day. Letters from a number of celebrities are also included. Toyohiko Kagawa and Mrs. Kaiser-Harnisch, among the better known.

This mail bag is dedicated to international amity. If just one reader gains a clearer understanding of the problems facing our friends across the water, and a more sympathetic, more cosmopolitan outlook, this mail bag will have served its purpose.

FROM GERMANY

This letter is from Mrs. Margarete Kaiser-Harnisch, one of the outstanding journalists of Germany, and prominent in her country as an organizer of women's clubs. She spoke at a special assembly in Proviso on April 15. The letter was received through Miss Helen Grant Norman while Mrs. Harnisch was on her second American tour.

To the students of Proviso Township High School.

When a European traveler enters the harbor of New York and sees the sky-line of Manhattan shining in the fluffy clouds, he cannot help feeling some of the excitement which the first settlers experienced when they came to this country to build a new world. America is still the New World for us people from Europe. We love our good old world, but we have always been deeply interested in the development of your new continent. Quite often Americans ask their guests, "Why did you come to this country?" "Well," I answer, "because we feel that a trip to the United States is as educational to us as a trip to Europe is supposed to be to Americans." Very different is your country from ours, and yet I have found it understandable and likable.

In 1931, I made up my mind to book a trip to New York to see America since I had already seen many European countries, but my plans did not work out until 1935. My enthusiasm, however, to visit your America for the great thrill I would get out of seeing her skyscrapers, her purple mountains and lakes, her hills, prairies, and sea shores, had not lessened in the meantime.

I have found that very little of our own daily life is known over here. Many Americans do not realize that we have to live under very different natural and social conditions, though many of our interests and activities are similar to yours. For example, our boys are not always supposed to pay for the movie ticket for their girl friends, even if they do invite them to go places to see one of your American movies, which we import and enjoy as well as we enjoy the German plays.

We found it quite interesting to learn that America is no longer a country of Indians and cowboys. You probably do not know how fond we are of all the noble heroes about whom we have read in the Indian stories, which form a very important part of our children's literature. Winnetou, the noble chief of the Apaches, and many other Redskins and trappers are alive in our imagination as the heroes of America's early days. We are a little bit puzzled not to find them any more while we are crossing the Ozarks and Alleghenies, but if we have our eyes and ears open, we do see much of the pioneer spirit still alive, especially if we go farther west.

Comparisons between Europe and America are dangerous. You have been brought up under different religions, different social and political conditions. You have benefited from natural resources of which Europe could never boast. Your very education is of another brand. While we were believing in classical studies and preparing for an intellectual life, you were of necessity interested in making yourselves fit to cope with practical life. Nowadays, you will find that a trend fostering the practical side of education is marching on successfully in Europe, while ever more young people in this country are going to get an intellectual education of which their parents never dreamed. Class distinctions, common in the history of Europe, have played a role in the economic history of Germany which cannot be compared with conditions in this country where the self-made man has always been an ideal.

But there can be understanding between nations, however. One thing which would make for internationalism, were all sides able to give up prejudices, would be the study of languages. Foreign languages should be studied for more than practical purposes. I never dreamed of getting to America while I was a child, but I enjoyed studying English as well as French and Latin. I have had to adjust my English to some of your idioms, of course, because one who learns English usually is able to read Shakespeare but is not able to ask for hot dogs with mustard. This adjustment, however, is something that even a "greenhorn" can make quickly; so today I am tempted to affirm an appointment by saying "O.K." just as you might say "knorke" were you to visit my home town of Berlin. This is a German slang expression, popular with our young people, meaning "just swell." I would not have you think that we always talk that way, but we do at times, just as you do.

Let me close with a word that was really said to me by one of your own teachers. "Mrs. Kaiser," she said, "after meeting you and your family and friends, I feel more keenly than ever before that if the peoples of the world could somehow learn to know each other better, suspicion and jealousy, selfishness and hatred, would gradually give place to an international understanding with an actual 'peace on earth, good will toward men.'" And I agree; you of America are not so different from us of Germany after all.

Most sincerely yours,
Margarete Kaiser-Harnisch

FROM FRANCE

Typical of the correspondence carried on by advanced students in the modern language classes is this letter received by Yolanda Olivar, '37.

Paris, France
18 Mars, 1937

Paris will be the subject of my letter. I don't know whether my impressions about Paris are rigorously exact but I see it, I understand it, I relate it such as it appears to me. When we speak about Paris, ever we add: "Paris, light-town," "Paris, museum-town," "Paris and its night-clubs": it's exact, but exaggerated. I know that the large avenues' illuminations are splendid; the Eiffel Tower is a great work, hardy for the epoch; the Louvre's museum contains inestimable treasures; the joyful good livers amuse themselves in the music halls of Montmartre, but there are other things. Paris has another charm and the true Parisian gets tired very quickly of the grand illuminations, of the museums, of the jazz's noise. But I admit that we discover the true aspect of Paris only after many years of stay in the capital.

Paris has its poesy in each season:

In Spring and Summer: the Boulogne's forest, the great pleasure-gardens, the botanical-gardens, the zoological garden.

In Autumn and Winter: the marvelous crepuscules on the Seine, the dark colour of the trees, and sometimes the snow that covers the details of the Parisian architecture

Paris has its charm likewise in the luxurious quarters and that in the working quarters. The large avenues of the quarter of the Star, bordered with splendid private houses, have a noble gait, indeed! But Montmartre is very moving, with its old sheds of artist with the windows always flowered; its winding streets which ascend to the same point: the Sacred-Heart Church. The quarter of the Monceau's garden, very aristocratic, is a little stern. But the quarter of the Great Schools and Universities full of students (the hope of the France) is very joyous.

They are my impressions very personal. But the difficultest man can interest himself at Paris

The man fond of architecture can see the Opera, the Great-Palace, Our-Lady Church, the Pantheon, the Louvre, etc.

The man fond of pictures, paint, or sculptures goes to the museums of Louvre, Carnavalet, Luxembourg, etc.

The man fond of music goes to the concerts universally known.

The man fond of nature takes a walk to the Boulogne's forest or to the Luxembourg or Tuileries very charming.

Lastly, the man who wishes divert himself, there are numerous theatres, music-halls, and movies.

But the next month the Exposition of Arts and Techniques will augment the grandeur of Paris. She will be, I hope, a complete success. I hope, also, that the foreign visitors shall be numerous. I know that the French steamers of the line: New-York, Plymouth, Le Havre, are all reserved during the Exposition.

Numerous foreign countries shall be represented and the most important shall be: U.S.A., Germany, England, Russia, Italy, Belgium. The "clou" will be the new Trocadero's Palace with its immense underground theatre.

Paris is a joyous and interest town. And so as I think see New-York, I hope that you will come, very numerous, to visit Paris during or after the Exposition; the French youth will receive you with gladness!

FROM JAPAN

Toyohiko Kagawa, social worker, humanitarian, poet, and lecturer, is one of the foremost Christian leaders in the world today. Moving spirit of that faith in his native Japan, he has profoundly influenced the whole field of religious and social thought. Described as "the most Christ-like of modern leaders," his fame has spread the length and breadth of the world through his brilliant lectures, his humble, self-sacrificing personality, and his deep understanding of human nature. His work in the slums of Kobe, his co-operatives to aid poor farmers, and his struggle to prominence through a sea of disbelief and physical suffering stamp him as one of the truly great of the world. My dear Student-Friends:

I appreciate your asking me for a message. I have recently returned from my fourth visit to your country, and my heart burns with the wish to speak to the hearts of you young people--and beg you to feel with me, the tie of world brotherhood.

My first trip to the United States was in the year 1914. I came as a student to Princeton university. I was very poor. Often I lived for days on shredded wheat biscuit and milk--and not so much of that. Many of my fellow students laughed at me as a "queer bird." In vacation time I worked as a servant. I did my best. But I sometimes made mistakes. Once I put salt instead of sugar into the coffee of the young lady of the household, who always took her breakfast in bed. She was mad, and I was fired. At another time I worked in a house that was fitted throughout with burglar alarms. Once very early in the morning I opened the window that I might climb out into the fresh air. It set the whole house into an uproar. And again I was fired.

After two years I returned to Japan. And again I toiled as a servant, trying to feed and clothe and cure and clean up the wretchedly poor people who lived in the slums of Kobe. Since those days, I have three times been invited to go back to your country to give lectures. The people have come by the thousands to hear me. On my recent visit, thousands were actually turned away--not able to get into the halls where I spoke.

Now why was this? I am nothing to look at. My English pronunciation is terrible. My voice is harsh. But as day after day I looked from the platform over a sea of faces, I thought: "These people have come to hear me, not because some people call me a leader, but because they know that I am a servant, that my life is given to serve the needs of my fellowmen in all the world. And in their own hearts there is a deep responsive chord."

Now I am thinking that you also want a message from me, because in your own souls there is a wish to serve--a hope that you may be able to help set in order and keep in order the splendid country of which you are citizens; a hope that you may so serve your country that all may be fed and clothed and cured, in soul and body, and enabled to live useful and joyous lives.

Make your land a model for all the world, my young friends. And my nation and all other nations will be eternally

Yours gratefully,

Toyohiko Kagawa

FROM CZECHOSLOVAKIA

This Czechoslovakian letter was secured through an aunt of Arlene Vanek, '37.

To the Students of the Institution:

This letter contains the story of the greatest glass-making town in the world.

During the fourteenth century, the Bohemians and Germans formed a small village by the name of Jablonetz (taken from the word "appletree"). At that time no one dreamed of the world-wide fame it would acquire. This fame started in the year 1550, when the first glass factory was opened. This gave a great deal of work to new-comers, and soon many various industries sprang up, one after the other. At the beginning, the progress was slow, and the people had to suffer during bad times, and rejoice with good times. The industries grew all through the centuries, and for this growth the present inhabitants can be thankful.

Entirely modernistic, the city lies in the plate-manufacturing area. It is five hundred yards above sea level, and has a population of 37,000, of which the greater number is German. Dense forests and high hills surround the great city, and running through it is a stream called Nisa, whose source is in the green hills.

Not far away are the snow blanketed mountains that can be reached by train in two hours. The peaceful mountains are different from the city, where the people lead a busy life. In the center, gold and silver sculptors work on plates and other metal goods. The town shops are filled with foreign exports, which connect the city with the whole world. A countless number of small industries are carried on in Jablonetz. Wherever one goes, he sees glass factories. The innumerable things manufactured cannot be named; the commerce of Jablonetz is widely distributed.

Glass vases, bathroom sets, and a number of other articles are made. Fake jewels, which are popular all over the world, are cut here. One does not realize how much work is necessary to make one small glass trinket. Lard and other chemicals are put in the ovens to make glass. The fire heating these furnaces must never be allowed to go out. When the glass is taken from the oven and cut, it is cooled slowly. Much of the cut glass is used for the making of buttons and cut beads. Each of these projects has its own various steps.

Some of the neighboring glassmaking villages are Smrzovka, Housberk, Rychlov, Tumberk, Kskouin, and Joseph Valley. Each has its own personal lure, which enchants the visitors. The city of Jablonetz is popular and famous in the Czechoslovakia state—democratic republic.

Signed,

Trudie.

FROM PANAMA

Robert Maher, '38, received this letter from a correspondent in Panama

Republic de Panama

I am doing an effort trying to write you the whole letter in English.

I don't know if I mentioned you before that we have a paper school named "Nueva Luz" which I preside. We must have ready the review before long. Really it is a hard work to get interesting articles, advises, etc.

We play here basket and baseball. I love reading so much. Often I go to movies. My favorite actors are: Frederic March, Clark Gable, Warner Baxter, Ann Harding, and Greta Garbo, and Shirley Temple, too. Sometimes I drive my mother's car. It is a fine Oldsmobile—style 1935.

By the other side, we organized too a "contest," but no a beauty contest. Is a "Conceurs de Simpaticos." I don't know how you call this. It is very interesting and funny because with the only purpose to make a girl blushed before public, some of her joking friends vote for her but with few votes

On November 3 we have a holy day. I suppose you know why. On November 3, 1903, we got our independence from Columbia and make of our country a Republic free and sovereignty. November is for us a month full of holy days as you can see: November 3, independence from Columbia—November 4, Flag Day—November 10 and November 28—Independence from Spain in 1821. I like very much this month

I had two weeks of vacation on September and I have enjoyed those days.

I went to the Atlantic shore and visited a group of Su Blas Islands, where the people lived in big ranchos make of coconut leaves and use ring in the nose and speak in their own language. Few of them can speak Spanish nor English. This is the most beautiful place I ever saw with their coconut palms, their golden sand and their picturesque people. I would love to spend part of my life there. The Indians have canoes and sometimes they use arrows. They have too medicine dolls, maracas and many strange things. I spent the last week on my uncle's farm. I went horse-back riding, went to Santa Clara Beach and have a great fun.

Now, I return to my school duties with the good purpose of obtain high notes, God willing

Always your friend,

Judith Miro.

To the Students of Proviso

England is the land of traditions! Take away from Britannia its ancient customs and you destroy it of its most cherished heritage. In this lies the answer to the problem which holds English life in channels of the past, such as antiquated residences, fireplace instead of the furnace, the bed-heating bottle, the Yorkshire pudding, the morning dress for business men, and the millions of cups of tea consumed during the day. Many of these items the English people could well afford to dispense with, particularly many of its traditions which, to say the least, are not a source of pride; yet it would be nothing short of heresy to deprive the inhabitants of England of these, their glorious past age.

In the summer time, rural England is indeed beautiful, the countryside having the appearance of a huge park. Each farm, each estate, is separated from the next by well-trimmed hedges, some originally of stone but now overgrown with grass or small shrubbery. While many of the fields are tilled for the production of grains and vegetables a large portion of the country is set aside as pasture for sheep and cattle. The abundant amount of moisture is reflected in a luxuriant growth of grass of the greenest hue, which being kept well cropped by the animals, gives the parklike scene.

Of antiquities, England is replete. There are the homes of old poets, ancient cathedrals galore, remnants of Roman occupation in the form of theatres, baths, etc. Almost all communities have hotels or road houses, the old public houses now referred to as "pubs," in which resided or dined in days past some of the noted men of England, statesmen, military officers, poets, royal personages, and no doubt a few highway bandits.

Of superlative interest, of course, is London, the world's largest metropolis, a city of limitless proportions, endless boundary lines, the seat of government, the home of royalty, the setting of Big Ben and the Bank of England, the last named being the financial stronghold of the world. While the center of attraction to both the natives and the tourists alike is Buckingham palace, the city residence of the king and queen, there are numerous other points excessively interesting.

At the moment, as the English expression goes,
the all-absorbing question is that of the coronation of a new king. The abdication of Edward VIII and the substitution on the throne of his brother, George VI, has not perceptibly ruffled the stoic existence of the British public, although under the surface there is a current feeling that much of the enthusiasm for the coming event has been lost. Edward, now the Loretta Smith, and Mr. C. C. Taggart.

Shikao Ikehara

Duke of Windsor, was very popular with the masses, much to the disconcertment of the ministers of the crown. However, preparations for the ceremonies are going on apace. The route of the procession (one must not say "parade" in England) is flanked by temporary seats, some of which cost the spectators from 9 to 100 guineas (up to $500 each) to see a spectacle that may not last more than a half hour at the most. All public buildings will be decorated.
Already all available hotel accommodations are reserved for the occasion, and London will be host to a large portion of the world's population. Poten-tates from all nations will attend. To any one inclined to approve of royalty, the event will be one of a lifetime. There are those not so inclined.

Sincerely yours

WORLD CITIZENSHIP

An Interview With Miss Amy Barnum

By Arlene Vanek

In these days of trouble and turmoil among many nations, the idea of world citizenship seems very remote, if not, indeed, fantastic. Here in America where many nationalities make up the population, we seem to come nearer to realizing this idea than anywhere else in the world.

Proviso is not unfamiliar with the term "world citizenship." Its own student body contains representatives from many countries. There are among its teachers not a few who emphasize the necessity of understanding the alien. Foremost among these is, perhaps, Miss Amy Barnum, head of the history department, who, having traveled in both Europe and the Orient, and having established contact with persons in distant lands, has developed that insight and tolerance which are the prime ingredients of world citizenship.

When we hear stories of alien customs, we may think that peoples of foreign countries live an entirely different existence from ours, and we see no similarity between their personalities and ours. But Miss Barnum has studied further, and understands that we and they are alike in many ways. In an interview with a Provi reporter, she says:

"Americans are no different from other peoples. There is a tendency on the part of every human being to think that his way of life is superior to that of others. That feeling of superiority is due to ignorance of other people's ways.

"When the leaders of nations do not understand people whose ways are different from their own, their misunderstanding often turns to fear, and even hate. So wars are bred.

"In a world in which there is so much goodness and beauty, it behooves us to open our eyes and see. Human beings are all seeking peace, security, and freedom; we would do well to help our fellow-men achieve happiness, as well as to seek to grasp it for ourselves.

"When one remembers that the notes in music, the rhythms of dancing, the colors in painting, the lines in architecture and sculpture, evoke the same emotions in all human beings, once they become familiar, the doors of appreciation are opened wide to a richer mental life."

Those who have not been fortunate enough to travel in other lands, wonder what there is about the old world that has made its charm a topic of poets and authors since time began. Miss Barnum shares her knowledge, and tells us what other countries can give us to broaden our education.

"Acquaintance with each nation of the earth furnishes us with new appreciation, new shades of meaning for old words and thought. To sing with the Italians, to eat with the Chinese, to dance with the Austrians, is to increase our capacity to enjoy living. The world is so much steadier after one makes the acquaintance of British ideas, so much more beautiful after one has viewed the moon or the cherry trees with a Japanese."

Many Americans, although they cannot afford to travel, have a desire to enrich their lives by becoming world-minded, by being able to understand foreign people and their ways. When asked how to become more alive in this respect, Miss Barnum replied:

"World mindedness is not the result of travel alone. To derive benefit from travel, I would say that one must be world-minded first, and then travel is beneficial.

"A school such as ours offers splendid opportunities to cultivate world-mindedness. The descendants of many nationalities mingle here to form our school population. The many tongues that are spoken in our community remind us constantly that the beauty of language and literature takes many forms. Located in the fertile heart of a great new nation, we have space and wealth and security. These things free our minds from fear, and so give us opportunity to be generous and helpful in times of need.

"I believe that Americans must be world-minded in order to be good Americans. Only if we use our wealth and power as a member of the world community shall we make a contribution to civilization. Let us seek to understand the stranger and the foreigner in our midst. Let us think, when foreign ways come to our attention, 'No, it isn't funny; it's French, or Chinese, or whatever it is.' Let us be sympathetic and eager to understand, and above all -kind."

FIREFLIES

By Naomi Stettenhagen

Fireflies in my garden!
Little, happy sparks of life,
Dancing among the nodding flowers,
I wonder why they love the darkness so—
Do they think they are making it brighter?
Tiny rivals of the stars,
Dare they compete with so vast a display?
Perhaps they know that in their own little world,
They are the stars!
Perhaps they know that children need them
To light the halls of Faeryland.
If they should become neglectful
And let their little lamps grow dim,
The flowers would miss them;
The children would miss them;
And I would miss—the memories they bring.

ENGLISH A LA CHINESE

The following theme was written by a first-year student at Hsiang Ya, a Chinese school. The writer's training is equal to that of a high school graduate. All his English has been taught by Chinese teachers. This theme is not printed to make fun of the student's English, but to show how foreigners struggle with the language.

A SUPERSTITIOUS WAY TO TREAT A MANIAC IN MY MOTHER VILLAGE

As a very serious inheritance from the ancestors, our inhabitants get the superstitious ways in doing everything, such as in wedding, in worship, and especially in curing insanity.

In the center of the village, there is a very magnificent temple in which we have a Buddha generally known as Holy Wang. It was said that Holy Wang was a very muscular man before, and he carried the power of keeping people under his charity free from the aggression of elves. So people build a statue in honor of his kindness and bereavement when he died.

For this reason Holy Wang is really busy, he will go out of his palace several times a day to do his duty for his people. But the only interesting thing he wishes to do is to treat a crazy man. Certainly it is not a fortune to the man who gets insanity and even more unfortunate to his whole family. So no sooner has a family a member inflicted with the terrible disease that they go to invite Holy Wang.

Under the bright sunshine you will hear the noises of drums and trumpets and a group of crowds will also be seen meanwhile. Carry on the shoulders of four particular persons—the elders of that family is our Holy Wang. He is so tall, so strong that makes all the people frightful. His golden cloth shining in air dazzles the eyes of the people. The silver helmet, the iron whip in his hand and the fierce tiger being trampled under his foot, everything furnished on his body attempts from the people the astonished light and then refuses their staring. Every shouts loudly, old and young. Pilgrims all kneel down on the ground and welcome their sole god with great warmth.

It is gradually listened by the sick man and then will dash out with all his might. He is very terri-gant and jumps here and there that he will finally break in upon the tranquil respect of the assemblage and call the people all to naught. Of course, the four persons who carry Holy Wang will also escape away with a throw of the Buddha on the ground. The madman seeing this solemn statue will immediately plug up his roughness and totters listlessly to him.

Falling on his knee, the madman will intimately smell all over the wooden body. Then a man creeps silently and hides himself behind Holy Wang and says, as if the Buddha says, "My fellow, your house is on fire." Ah! you see he dashes terribly onward and from that time on his disease is cured.

Holy Wang is generous enough. Although he has cured the person well and given great hospitality to the people, yet he wants no payment, but a piece of pretty red silk is secured on his head to show his kind and brave deed.

FROM ITALY

Urbino, Italia

12 Aprile, 1937

Dear Brother Humbert:

I hope that this letter arrives at Proviso in plenty time for its publication in the Provi. I have delayed writing because I have been so busy, and, too, because like most individuals, I put off doing today what I can do tomorrow.

"Why do so many tourists come to Italy?" you asked me. It is very easy to reply to that in a lengthy discussion, but difficult to reply briefly. All of us have a spontaneous as well as a keen desire to see again the land of our birth—the scenes of our childhood. Tourists desire to visit Italy—the cradle of civilization; the birthplace of the antique art and art of the Renaissance, of science, of law, of music, and of literature. So they come from across the Alps and beyond the oceans.

There are those who come to Italy to regain their health beneath our beautiful serene skies and with the aid of our healthful climate; still others come to admire the great treasures of art in which Italy abounds. Those who feel a need for inspiration come to our shores and are not disappointed. Goethe, Shelley, Keats, Byron, and the Brownings were a few who came for this one thing and found it, and through their poetry have inspired the world. Musicians, singers, scientists, writers, and artists crowd Italy, and breathe deep of its old culture and civilization.

New Italy offers to its tourists personal freedom and liberty. One finds in Italy much in the way of natural beauty. Who has not desired to see Genoa, Milano, Turino, the Italian Lakes, Venice, Florence, Rome, the Bay of Naples, Capri, Palermo, and the two Rivas? Who has not thrilled at the irresistible azure of Italian skies or the blue of its many seas? The Italian hotels, their Italian hospitality, Italian cooking, and Italian wines are the delight of its many tourists.

So, briefly and in part I have responded to your question—Why do so many tourists come to Italy? I sincerely hope that the people of your great land of adoption may some day visit our shores and partake of the great beauty and advantages which Italy has to offer.

Your affectionate brother,

Virgilio.

TWILIGHT POEMS

(Written as a classroom exercise in the course in creative writing, after words associated with the word "twilight" had been written on the blackboard, and the pupils asked to meditate until ideas occurred to them.)

TWILIGHT ON THE LAKE

By Lenore Worswick

For one golden moment
The sun poises itself on the treetops,
And then dives from sight
Over the edge of the world.
As a purple haze gathers,
The still air leaves the lake smooth as glass,
No longer wrinkled with care.
A hush has fallen on the world
As it waits breathlessly for Night
For one long moment,
Peace is the supreme ruler.
As the purple haze deepens
And turns to black,
The eerie cry of an owl
Is wafted over the still water,
And then the mournful cries of birds
Join in the serenade of Night.
And crickets chirp
As Night awakens
To take sleeping Day's place
As guardian over the lake

TWILIGHT CAME -

By Naomi Steffenhagen

Twilight came like the homing of birds
From afar, on silent wings.
Twilight came like a vision of peace
From some distant, tranquil shore.
Twilight came like a song being born,
A nocturne of night and shades,
A breath of infinity;
Twilight came, like a ship at sea
Sailing at eve into the crimson sunset;
Twilight came like a fog at dawn
A dense, thick curtain of gray
That shrouded the world and shut
Out the light—falling endlessly.
Twilight came like a gray-cowled monk Strolling among the shadows;
Twilight came like a black-gowned woman
With mourning in her eyes, for something
That would never come again;
Twilight came like a shadowy menace,
Gazing amid the ghostly gloom
Of marble, white monuments,
Twilight came like relentless fate,
And after it came—the Night.

TWILIGHT

By Louise Greenwell

The twilight steals across the earth.
Her royal robes of purple sweep
Across the sun's all-glaring face.
Her veil is eerie, misty haze;
Her eyes, the shining evening star.
The moon, a halo round her head
The dew, a tear-drop, on her cheek.
The tiny fireflies light her way;
The crickets sing a melody.
Her cool, sweet breath like perfume blows
Across the hot and tired earth.
Her fingers, streaks of moonlight, dip
Into the water's mystic depth.
But night has found his lady fair
And wrapped her in a cloak of black
He carries her across the sky
Into the arms of holy sleep.

FIRST STAR OF TWILIGHT

By Dorothy Parker

Enfolding first the mountains,
Sending through their deep deep valleys
Mystic, ghostly, creeping shadows;
Stealing o'er the flat, wide plains
With its impregnable cloak of gray—
Twilight comes,
Enmeshing all in sight
In its thick net

The thick net rips,
As the crescent moon's tip
Is caught in one loose seam,
And through the tear
The first dim star of eve appears,
This followed soon by other stars,
Of which some tear their own small holes
And pin them up, and then, ashamed
Of their misdeed, stand over them,
That others may not see.

TWILIGHT THOUGHTS

By Mary Birch

Like the gray cowl of an old monk,
Folding his hands for evening prayer,
The dusky twilight envelops
A weary, waiting world
With a cloak of whispering shadow,
That gently covers all things,
As quietly and softly
As the old man places his dark hood
Over his tired, holy head.

JINGLES

Arlene Vamek

There was a fine president "Hank"
Whom all of the seniors do thank;
The night of the Prom
With a maid he did come,
Blasting his girl-hating rank.

There was a fair Scotch lady Les,
Her native land you'd never guess.
When asked one fine day,
If she, by the way,
Was from India, Lesley cried "Yes."

Judith was once a great eater;
Though try, there was none who could beat her;
She bet with a friend
She'd eat more in the end
And now the young friend has to treat her.

There was a young treasurer Paul,
Of class dues he made a great haul.
He stuck to his work
Till his friends he did irk,
And would let no creditors stall

Dot Carver, they call her by name
Was tooting a flute for her fame;
But she started to write,
And found she was bright,
And that's how our editor came.

A brilliant young fellow called Bruce,
Had one lock of hair that hung loose
He fought it with zest,
And gave it no rest
Till that one curl and Bruce called a truce.

Oh, Natalie wrote all she could,
For a newspaper here in Maywood,
The students would hint
Till their names were in print,
And then say, "This column is good!"

Now Betty was such a sweet maid,
Her teachers she always obeyed,
As for her last name,
We can't give you same,
For there's Caffero, Hunter, and Wade.

There once was a trainer named Jim,
Who cared for the grid team with vim;
He worked not in vain,
For soon he did gain
The well-earned letter they gave him.

There was a fast runner called Clyde,
No other could quite reach his stride;
He'd start 'round the track,
And soon he was back,
With medals to model with pride

Galvin could sing quite a song;
She held her notes both clear and long.
She told Major Bowes
As she tried for his shows,
"I hope that I don't get the gong!"

Our managing editor, Campbell—
Not related to soup, we will gamble—
Checks both names and faces,
In numerous places,
And all through the halls she does ramble

There was a young Helen MacPhail,
Who liked to send letters by mail;
With each clerk she fought,
When some paper she bought—
The Scotch lady wanted it wholesale

The G. A. A. boasted of Lang,
And always her praises it sang,
To the field she would go
With a baseball in tow,
And start off each game with a bang

There's a candid kodaker named Stromquist
Whose camera aim is not oft missed;
With double exposures
He makes rare disclosures,
And gives people's features a quaint twist.

A sweet maiden called Anna Mae
Read "Gone with the Wind" every day.
She'd laugh and she'd sigh,
She'd ne'er raise an eye,
Till that book she had read, all the way.

There's a pianist named Helen Hayes
On every occasion she plays
For groups and for solos,
For dances and style shows,
Her hearers with music she aways.

There was a young blonde named Fran,
Who wanted a Bula-ful tan,
She sat in the sun
And baked till well done,
Then cooled herself off with a fan.

Special causes call for special effort. Beginning with 1944 the Provi has followed the practice of limiting the number of patrons to provide a fund for the purchase of books and other materials for the annual to worthy seniors who are unable to buy them, and to the seniors themselves. This year, with a few exceptions the patrons listed were limited to three. Elaine Wertheimer, James Wertheimer, and James Wertheimer contributed definitely to the success of the book. ADVERTISING SECTION

The Provi Staff of 1937 gratefully acknowledges the patronage of those individuals and firms which have purchased advertising space in this yearbook. While immediate business returns from such advertising may not be forthcoming, it is worth while to have one's advertisement appear in a volume which is part of the permanent record of a great and growing institution like Proviso High School. Advertising in the Provi means that the advertisers have faith in the young persons who prepare the book, and are willing to help promote projects dear to their hearts, such as this annual. The whole Class of 1937 says "Thank you."
